The FBI Story

CHAPTER 26

Scientist and The Stranger

—by Don Whitehead

It was Dec. 3, 1943. The United States Fifth Army in Italy was slowly hacking bloody path across the Nazi-held mountains toward Cassino. On the Russian front, the tide had turned against the Germans in the battle for Stalingrad.

From out of the Atlantic's icy mist, the British transport Andes steamed into the sheltered waters of Norfolk, Va., and dropped anchor. The long, hazardous voyage from England was over. At the ship's rail a small group of British scientists laughed and joked as the lines were made fast and preparations completed for them to go ashore.

Fuchs Had Fled

None of these men could know that in the pooling of their knowledge with the Canadians and Americans they would harness the atom as a military weapon in the incredibly short time of 19 months. Not even the brilliant, sallow-faced young physicist, starting for the first time at the United States, could imagine such an achievement.

Klaus Fuchs had fled to England from Germany in 1933 after Hitler had risen to power in the Reich, just as many scientists had fled. Now he had British citizenship. Already he had established a reputation as an extraordinary brilliant physicist and mathematician.

Klaus Fuchs knew no one well in America, except a sister in Cambridge, Mass. But somewhere out there among the millions of people was a stranger was waiting for him. Fuchs knew that one day he and this man would meet.

The young scientist turned from the rail and hurried with the others down the gangplank. There was no bothersome red tape or checking by security officers.

FBI Wasn't Told

The army had exclusive responsibility for guarding atomic security and for clearing personnel assigned to the Manhattan Engineer District, which directed the atomic energy program. The British had assured the army that Fuchs had been screened and found to be trustworthy and loyal. These assurances were accepted.

So light was the army's censorship of its atomic plans that even the FBI wasn't told what was under way. The FBI first became aware of the development of the atomic bomb through its surveillance of West Coast Communist Party leaders in 1943.

Comments were heard with increasing frequency by informants in party circles concerning a new and powerful weapon, the use of uranium and the application of atomic theory to the development of the new weapon. The information was leaking from a secret project at the University of California, where party members had friendly contacts with some of the scientists.

Fuchs had been in the United States only a few weeks when he stepped one day from a subway in New York's lower East side.

The Stranger Arrives

Passersby may have smiled faintly at the thin, sallow fellow, bundled in an overcoat, who carried a white tennis ball in his hand. But perhaps not. Even more uncommon sights go unnoticed on New York's streets.

Then Klaus Fuchs saw the Stranger. The scientist knew him instantly by the gloves in his hand and the book with the green binding. He was middle-aged, perhaps 5 feet 10, and solidly built. His face was round and impassive. The Stranger's eyes flicked to the tennis ball in Fuchs' hand. He spoke and the two of them stepped into a cab.

When they were seated at a table in a restaurant on lower Third Avenue, the Stranger said, "I am Raymond." Never was he to let Fuchs know that his real name was Harry Gold.

"I am Dr. Klaus Fuchs," Signal Arranged

Fuchs told his companion of the super-secret Manhattan Engineer District. He talked of the concentrated effort to solve the scientific and industrial puzzle of quantity production of fissionable uranium, and of the goal of harnessing the

2 Salem Men Held For Investigation After Guilty Pleas

A man, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon following a fight at a Salem residence, was held for pre-sentence investigation following an appearance before Circuit Judge George R. Duncan Monday afternoon.

He was Fred Albert Henderson, 960 Broadway. During the fight the second man received a knife wound.

George Edward Tennes, 1430 1/2 Liberty St., also was held for pre-sentence investigation after pleading guilty to forgery involving a $24 check.

Robert LeRoy Konold, 248 Mize Rd., was placed on probation on condition that he make restitution of a $65 check. He had been given a 90-day suspended sentence on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses.

William Elliot Milley, 2397 Hazel Ave., will spend 30 days in the state hospital for observation. He had pleaded guilty to the robbery of a Cantalaria drug store, Dec. 25.

Edward Theodore Bolton, St. Paul, charged with burglary not in a dwelling, was placed on probation for two years. He was involved in a break-in of the St. Paul high school in December.
