The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill to exempt fraternal societies, sororities and other non-profit campus living units from payment of personal property taxes. This is the result of a Tax Commission ruling that these taxes had to be paid.

Students Study Government

Students from 13 colleges are learning first hand the way state government operates through the Oregon Citizenship Legislative seminar which goes into its second day Friday.

Thursday evening the college students of government and their instructors heard Gov. Robert D. Holmes say that Oregon does not want "rubber stamp" legislators or governors.

He told them that if a man is unwilling to assume the responsibility of veto power he has no right to be governor.

The students Thursday attended sessions of the house and senate and later committee sessions. They also heard Senate President Boyd R. Overhulse and House Speaker Pat Dooley discuss the role of presiding officers and Sen. Harry D. Bovin talk on the function of committees.

Members of the lobby explained their function.

After attending the meeting of the ways and means committee and the legislative sessions this morning, the seminar heard four legislators discuss "How to Get Elected." Paul W. Harvey, Jr., Associated Press correspondent, told of "Covering the Legislature" at a noon luncheon.

Today in Salem

The mail came and in it is one of the inevitable advertisements—the one from a national book club.

Good use will be made of it by Doug Seymour, the C-J city editor has a hobby involving such mailed advertisements and I have taken to turning all such mail over to him.

Doug, it seems, got fed up some time ago with getting dozens of such solicitations from book clubs, magazine firms, political groups, etc., along with offers of samples or special rates on everything from disposable diapers to headache pills.

In reprisal, he now takes the literature from one such outfit, stuffs it in the postage-paid envelope from another place and drops it in the mailbox. Occasionally, he even drops in a few newspaper clippings to make it overweight so the company can pay the postage due when it arrives.

Doug heartily recommends the practice to everyone. He figures if the advertisers have to punt up the extra dough for postage each way, they'll look for a less expensive way of advertising and quit loading up the mail with unwanted literature.

Our advertising department got a full-page play in latest Spotlight, H. J. Heinz Co. magazine, for a baked bean advertisement.

The ad, which ran in a fall issue of Salem papers, heavily featured new brand of beans in full-page grocery promotion. In center of page was picture of two hunters seated on log alongside guns and decoys, enjoying can of beans over a campfire.

The "lake" in the background is actually the borrow pit at Salem by-pass and Mission street, hunters are two Heinz representatives and the one real duck in the picture was found alongside the highway as they went to take a campfire.

"I like your new column," an admiring (?) reader confided the other day.

"I just open the paper, look for your picture and start laughing." Hummm!

Connecticut state Rep. Elmer Mortenson is in favor of allowing teachers more leeway in the use of corporal punishment. The father of 13 children, he says it would be impossible to live at his home without corporal punishment.

Presumably Oregon teachers are already checking the list of Oregon legislators for someone with 13 children to take up the cudgel for them here.

In passing: "Hi," said the mindreader as he met a fellow seer on the street. "You're fine. How am I?"

Ruckman Named To Fescue Group

Gov. Robert D. Holmes today appointed Tom Ruckman, prominent Union county seed grower and warehouse operator, to Oregon's Fescue and Creeping Red Fescue committee.

Ruckman succeeds Sen. Dwight Hopkins on the commodity commission. The term expires next June 30. Hopkins resigned on his election to the state Senate last November.

Brucellosis Committee Mulls Cattle Disease

Federal funds should pay the cost of testing cattle for Brucella disease, decided the state Brucellosis committee at a meeting Thursday.

As things stand now, the producer or purchaser pays $1 to $1.50 per cow. However, the action of the committee is contingent on the auction market bill now before the legislature.

To Be Guests

Members of the Salem Men's Garden club will be guests of the state department of agriculture Tuesday night at 7:30. The meeting will be held in the basement of the agriculture building.

Few Problems Here, Hardy States to 140

Salem is a good place to live and work. The city has few problems common to a growing city of its size but will have to keep looking forward and continually planning if it is to maintain the present pace, David Keith Hardy, noted traveling lecturer, told a Salem audience last night.

Some 140 persons heard Hardy and viewed the film, "Our Living Future," at Leslie Junior high school. Hardy said he has seen few cities "with problems so minimal as Salem's."

But he warned listeners that this is the time of greatest danger. "Necessary public action to combat city decay is less likely in a community such as this where problems aren't so great."

He cited septic tank open drainage, aging homes and poor sewage that will have to be cleaned up locally or will become a blight on the city.

Basically, he said, the job in Salem is to hold the line. He urged that the downtown area be made more "beautiful if it is going to keep up with suburban stores."

The Salem Junior Woman's club, chamber of commerce and the city council were sponsors of the program.

Polio Drive to Aid Henry Lelec, Gervais, Dies

The drive for funds to aid polio victim Jerry Sadtler gained added impetus Friday with announcement that jars are being placed in Salem stores and banks for direct contributions.

Mrs. Eugene Zuger, 1369 Norway, is furnishing the jars and said she will place the jars in all stores who call and request them from her.

She said one store collected $25 in a short period Thursday. Some 15 jars are now out, she said. Money collected will be deposited to an account at the Commercial bank of Salem. Direct contributions can also be sent there.

A series of coffees is also being held this week to benefit the Sadtler family. Visitors at one coffee Thursday contributed $43.47 to the fund. The Elks lodge reported that some $300 was contributed there Wednesday and Thursday.

Meanwhile, Sadtler was reported to be "slightly improved" at the Salem Memorial hospital. Hospital attendants said that he was feeling "some better, but progress is awfully slow in a case such as this."

State Needs More Ag Effort, Steward Says

By CLAUDE STEUSLOFF
Capital Journal Writer

"It is my view that by working concertedly, we can deal in a positive way with problems of agriculture in Oregon," Robert J. Steward, newly-appointed state agriculture director, told the 47th annual convention of the Oregon State Farmers Union Thursday in his first public appearance since being appointed.

The Baker county cattleman, who will take over the office at the conclusion of the legislature, said he did not approve of the often-heard statement that the state does not touch agriculture except for regulation or tax collection.

Discussing the house ways and means committee, of which he is chairman, Steward explained it is just getting down to work and it will be a month or six weeks before the need for services can be correlated with money needed.

Good inspection needed, state agriculture director, told the 47th annual convention of the Oregon State Farmers Union Thursday in his first public appearance since being appointed.

The speaker traced the history of partly legislated and concluded by saying: "Not only the administration but others, including at least one farm organization, are now repudiating the party policy. With the sliding party scale they are saying 90 per cent is too good for farmers."

Other speakers heard at the sessions Thursday included Dr. A. L. Strand, president of Oregon State college, and H. D. Rolph, national vice president of the Farmers Union. Rolph said 2,103 farm families now belong to the organization in Oregon.

Arthur H. Bone, editor of the Farmers Union newspaper, announced he had signed a new three-year contract.

Housing for Ball Tournery Fans Needed

Public housing for fans who will accompany their teams to the Class A-2 basketball tournament to be held in Salem March 11-13, may be hard to secure in view of the legislative session.

With this in prospect officials of the Salem Exchange club are asking for the cooperation of the general public. The tournery will draw from many parts of the state, with many individuals remaining here during the three days of play.

Accommodations have been secured for the players. Persons who will provide rooms for fans are asked to dial EM 4-6919 between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Holmes Corrects Statement on Vets

Gov. Robert D. Holmes issued a correction of his statement, issued Wednesday relative to veterans' loans.

The Governor said that the release credited him with supporting an increase in the percentage of appraised value on home and farms on which loans are based from 75 per cent to 90 per cent. The figures, he said, should read 80 per cent, a five per cent increase in the present schedule.
