Filmland's Favorite Guessing Game: Who's 'The Great Man'?

By ALINE MOSSBY

United Press Hollywood Writer

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Hollywood's busiest guessing game these days is who is "The Great Man?"

"We had nobody in mind when we made that motion picture," announced producer Aaron Rosenberg in his office today with the manner of a man who often has to have an answer ready for that question.

Rosenberg, with director-star Jose Ferrer, turned out the film, "The Great Man," from the best-selling book by Al Morgan. It's the first intriguing film to be released this year.

"The Great Man" tells about a television idol who has a folksy, lovable approach that has endeared him to millions; when he dies, a lowly disc jockey, played by Ferrer, has to produce a program about the celebrated star," Rosenberg said.

Unhappiness Discovered

In the course of looking into the great man's life, Ferrer finds out the idol was a miserable, unhappy cuss who was difficult to work for and loved no one.

As in the case of "Citizen Kane" and "The Barefoot Contessa," persons who've seen the picture have been speculating in fan letters, columns and conversation as to the real-life model of the main character.

"People always ask me that leading question," sighed Rosenberg. "They say, is it Berle, Godfrey or Jackie Gleason, but honestly we didn't have any specific character in mind. I guess you could say the great man is a cross section of many people in television. It could be many people you see on your television set."

Film Arouses Curiosity

"You could dig into the lives of any great personality and find startling things that have happened to him that the audience never knows about. People apparently are curious to see the movie because they identify various persons with it."

So far the producer at Universal-International studio has heard only from one entertainer.

"I was lunching with Al Morgan, the author, at the Brown Derby and Milton Berle came over and accused Morgan of doing his life story," said Rosenberg. "I don't know whether Berle was kidding or being serious."

Although television might not hand "The Great Man" any orders, U-I is proud of its movie and plans to pump it for the Oscar awards in 1958.

In 30 B. C. when Roman Emperor Augustus Caesar became ruler of Egypt, he ordered Egyptian craftsmen sent to Rome to give training in the making of glassware. He demanded glass in tribute.
