Rain in Texas Brings Smiles

DALLAS (AP) — A belt of fog, drizzle or light rain extended across much of drought-seared Texas Monday, following a week-end of widespread precipitation that caused jubilation among the farmers.

The Weather Bureau said the fog and drizzly rain extended on a line from Childress in northwest Texas to Abilene and down to Laredo in south Texas and eastward across the state. It was clear south and west of the line.

The Weather Bureau forecast clearing skies and mild temperatures Monday for all areas.

Dist. Agriculture Agent Ted Martin of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Denton said farmers in north central Texas are more optimistic because of the recent rainy weather than they have been for five years.

Milk prices in Salem took another cent a quart hike Monday morning following leads by Portland milk distributors Saturday.

Two major Salem distributors, Curly's Dairy and Mayflower Milk company, raised prices to 25 cents per quart for home delivery and 23 cents a quart in stores.

Cream and skim milk prices will also increase one cent, the dealers said.

'Butch' Doesn't Bark

Four-year-old Laurie Watkins found out Saturday that a toy stuffed dog is just about as nice as the real thing, even if it doesn't bark out loud.

Laurie found "Butch," a prize Boston bulldog, curled up Friday in the carport of her house at 315 South 16th St., just as if he was a prize from Santa.

But her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack N. Watkins, chose to inform city police of the find, and Saturday, the Harold Heaths of Seattle showed up to claim the pooch as theirs.

But Laurie still got her dog. The Heaths gave her a stuffed-toy dog as a reward. She said she'd call him "Butch."

INSIDE HOLLYWOOD

By ROB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — One of the choice acting plums of the year has gone to a pretty Georgia peach named Joanne Woodward. "The Three Faces of Eve," a fascinating real-life story. She portrays a young housewife — also from Georgia — who amazed medical circles by revealing three distinct personalities.

The story was first written in a medical journal as "a case of multiple personality" by Drs. Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Cleckley of the University of Georgia. A book for popular consumption, bearing the film's title, was published last week.

The case concerns a woman who has been called Eve White, a quiet, melancholy wife who suffered violent headaches and amnesia. During those times, she turned into Eve Black, a wisecracking, fun-loving girl who liked to do the things Eve White thought were wrong.

The conflict of the two personalities wrecked her marriage and threatened her sanity. During the course of her therapy, a third personality came out. She was Jane, a cultured, well-adjusted individual. Jane won out over the two Eves, and the woman is now remarried and happy.

As a guide for her role, Joanne has actual films recording Eve's personality transitions during interviews by doctors. It is fascinating to watch as the Georgia woman switches abruptly from a meek, soft spoken housewife to a flip-talking pleasure girl. That's the way the switches will be done in the 20th Century-Fox movie, without the Jeckyll-Hyde theatrics.

How did Joanne come so far so fast? Ambition had a lot to do with it. She wanted to be an actress as far back as she can remember in her Thomasville, Ga., youth.

"My brother got the measles and I substituted for him in giving the pledge of allegiance at a program when I was 3," she recalled. "The audience clapped and clapped, and they had trouble getting me off the stage. I loved it so."

After a couple of years in L.S.U., she fulfilled her ambition to assault New York. She studied at the neighborhood Playhouse, did a lot of TV.

Dick Powell showed one of her TV films to 20th-Fox boss Buddy Adler, and the studio gave her a contract.
