LOS ANGELES (A — A fasimile of Josef Stalin walked the busy downtown streets — and hardly caused a stir.

Actor Maurice Manson, a striking double for the late Soviet ruler, emerged from a big limousine yesterday at 7th and Broadway, icts.

There were a few double takes among the passers-by, but most looked at him as if Stalin was something you see every day. At one corner, he inquired of a policeman:

"Could you tell me please how if the please how if the please how if the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please how it was accosted by a habilitude of the please of the p man:

"Could you tell me please how I find FBI? I joost come here from Russia and don't know my waw yet."
The policeman, playing it straight-faced, said he wasn't sure of the location but asked "Stalin" to wait a minute while he looked with a didner in the rocket. "Hey, buddy," the wino yelled, "how about buying another serv-iceman a drink? I was in the first World War.

Manson replied: "I drink only pure Russian vodka." to what a minute while he looked up the address in his map book. The officer courteously spelled out the directions.

Next stop was a news vendor's, where the actor asked if he could buy a copy of Pravda.

"I'm sorry," the vendor replied

WISHING

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
