

Washington Scene . . .

—By Lillian Porter Say

Washington, Feb. 26 (Special) — Never antagonize men. Work with them and they'll help you get ahead. We should always be women. I take time to dress and put a flower in my hair.

These were some of the observations of Dona Felisa Rincon de Gautier, mayor and city manager of San Juan, Puerto Rico, at a luncheon given in her honor by the Women's National Press club. She was right at home with the club and its members for President Allice Frelia Johnson of Seattle, and a group of the newswomen had been her honor's guests during a vacation tour of the Caribbean last summer. Mrs. de Gautier has visited the Capital many times and has many friends here. Sitting at the head table near her was another former lady mayor, Portland's Dorothy McCullough Lee, who is now chairman of the Subversive Activities Board.

Also visiting with the mayors from San Juan was Maurine, wife of Senator Richard Neuberger of Portland.

Project of Mrs. de Gautier is the construction of private housing units to help relocate families displaced by urban renewal or other government actions in San Juan.

Dashing in for exactly seven minutes was Bea Lillie, who is currently starring in the Ziegfeld Follies. After a quick "hello" Miss Lillie chanted and sang all the verses to "a cheerful little number just sent me by Noel Coward," entitled, "Bad Times Are Just Around the Corner," each verse ends with the delectable refrain, "Ho, ho, ho, ho, ho, ho, trouble is on its way."

No matter what goes on in the Middle East Ambassador and Mrs. Eban are planning to present a young, Israeli musical genius to official Washington and close friends. He is 14-year-old pianist Daniel Barenboim, who with his parents Professor and Mrs. E. Barenboim will be here early in March. Daniel was born in Buenos Aires, started his career at the age of five, and was presented in a concert at seven. He recently played an all Beethoven program in New York. As guests of the Eban's, he will probably play Beethoven, Bach, Chopin, and selections from the Israeli composer, Ben Haim.

One of the most friendly and democratic of ambassadorial wives is blond Susan Eban. She has made of the Israeli Embassy a beautiful spot. Of English architecture it sets in a wooded residential section of the District. Its rooms are bright with warm pictures of the Mediterranean, sand-colored rugs and hangings; and light furniture. A conversation piece is her coffee table in the drawing room. A plastic top covers an immense gold fish bowl, giving a Dall effect when some tropical fish swims beneath one's cup and saucer. Along with tea sandwiches she serves chocolates made in Israel.

Shortly after their little daughter was born the Eban's visited Oregon and she never fails to recall "a most happy experience." Gila, whose name in Hebrew connotes joy and righteousness, is two years old now. Her brother, Eli, is seven. Born in New York and attending an American school, he is learning Hebrew from a tutor. In Mrs. Eban's spare moments she paints. She also likes to work in silver and has presented her secretary with a bracelet of her own fashioning. At one time she dreamed of writing "but that was before I met my learned husband." His study is lined with books and she mentioned proudly that he is among other things a most accomplished linguist, speaking many languages fluently. They met in Cairo.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Classen chose a dress of dusty rose crepe accented with pink and white accessories. Mrs. Glyshaw wore a pink lace dress with a scalloped neckline outlined in sequins, and white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of pink and white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was given in the church social rooms. Mrs. Henry C. Friesen acted as hostess at the reception. Cutting the cake were sisters-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Bert Classen and Mrs. Art Classen. Serving the punch was Miss Lorene Kroecker, cousin of the bride, and pouring the coffee was Mrs. Martin Kroecker, aunt of the bride. Assisting were Mrs. Gary Saunders and Miss Mary Alice Owens of Portland; Miss Lovella Classen, niece of the bride; Miss Louann Friesen, Miss Naomi Kliever, Miss Katherine Schroeder, Miss Shirley Classen, Miss Verna Classen and Miss Helen Thiessen. Hanging above the bride's table were pink hearts and streamers of pink and white. On the table was a white nylon cloth and a tiered cake and pink tapers.

For going away the bride changed to a navy blue box suit of wool with navy and white accessories and an orchid corsage.

After a short wedding trip the couple will make their home in Billings where Mr. Glyshaw does church work with the Arbor Mission.

Fashion Manager Discusses Styles

The strongest new trend in fashions this spring is the "cape look," reports Mrs. Christina Schaefer, fashion manager of Montgomery Ward and company, who has just returned from a meeting at which spring collections of styles were previewed.

"Capes are shown in all lengths. There are full length capes for wear over dresses and suits, brief capes over dresses, suits with large cape collars. Both the costume and 'My Fair Lady' looks continue strong," Mrs. Schaefer reports.

"More and more dresses are shown with short or long coats lined with matching material. The empire lines, blousy backs and frilly fronts that characterize the fair lady look also are much in evidence," she adds.

Turning to suits and sportswear, Mrs. Schaefer says the appearance of pastel furs, dyed to match, on the collars of many suits and the continued emphasis on the ivy look—button down collars, tab belt backs, roll-up sleeves—in sportswear, are highlights.

Silks blends lead the parade of new spring fabrics with lilac, mint and coral topping the array of new colors. "All three of these colors blend beautifully with gray, beige, navy and black," Mrs. Schaefer states.
