15 MEN TO 'GO ABOARD' AF to Reoccupy T3, Floating Ice Island

By VERN HAUGLAND
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said today it plans to reoccupy this week the floating ice island in the arctic it calls T3.

The Air Force also soon will establish a new floating post on the ice pack north of Alaska, some 700 miles west of T3.

The two positions, within 525 miles of the North Pole, will be used for scientific observations during the 18-month International Geophysical Year starting July 1.

T3, also known as Fletcher's Island, drafts in a counter clockwise direction around the pole at the rate of about a mile and a half a day. It moves westward along the Canadian coast into the Beaufort Sea, across the pole and back to the area of Ellesmere Island.

The other station, on ice only 10 to 12 feet thick, will accommodate 10 Air Force support personnel and 10 scientists, led by Maurice Davidson, from Columbia University's Lamont Geological Observatory. The island will be serviced by Air Force units in Alaska.

Fletcher's Island will be served from Thule air base in Greenland. It is 4 1/2 miles wide and 9 miles long, and the ice averages about 150 feet in thickness.

The island was occupied from March 1952 until May 1954, and in 1955 from June until September. Used for weather observations, it was abandoned when it drifted into areas served by more permanent stations.

The Air Force will fly in 14 36-foot house trailers for use as laboratories as well as housing quarters on T3. Fifteen airmen, all volunteers, will be stationed there.

Maj. Willie Knudson from 8th Air Force headquarters at Westover Air Force Base, Mass., will head the T3 military group. The scientific leader there will be Norman Goldstein of the Air Force Geophysical Research Directorate at Cambridge, Mass.

In addition to weather studies, the scientists will measure the current flow, temperature and salinity of the ocean water at various depths, and will study the ocean bottom and marine life.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chilean voters apparently gave a drubbing in Sunday's parliamentary elections to President Carlos Ibanez's Farm Labor Party, identified with an unpopular anti-inflation program.

Early incomplete returns indicated a comeback for the opposition Radical Party. The Radicals, who lost the 1952 election and held only 18 seats in the outgoing Chamber of Deputies, already had clinched 42 seats and claimed they would hold a majority of the 147 seats in the new chamber.

All chamber seats and 20 of the 40 Senate places were at stake. The president's tenure was not affected by the election. His term extends to November, 1958.

2,000,000 EARS OUT OF WORK

Nearly 2,000,000 people wear hearing aids today. But because they wear old-fashioned instruments, most of them hear with only one ear! So their other ear is "out of work," not paying its way, robbing them of half their precious hearing.

HEAR WITH BOTH EARS

It's different now! No longer need these "lazy" ears be out of work—because for the first time a hearing aid has been engineered especially to allow hard-of-hearing persons to hear with both ears!

STEREOPHONIC HEARING

When you hear with both ears, you get a stereophonic effect—just like watching "Cinerama." Flat sounds become full and clear—you hear which direction sounds come from (very difficult with one-ear hearing).

ANOTHER TELEX FIRST

Now a Telex especially designed for hearing with both ears. No receiver in the ear! Features volume control, off-on switch. A new and wonderful hearing experience is waiting for you. Come in for a free demonstration or write for complete information.
