Now that spring is here and summer on its way, comes the word that we can look forward to finding 40 or more varieties of mosquitos in the valley area this year. No, not any more than usual, just that it's the first time as far as I know that the government has seen fit to release this information.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture research lab in Corvallis passed on the information to a Corvallis newspaperman. We're lucky that we have only 40-plus varieties, the researchers say. There are some 2,000 known varieties of skeeters in the world. There are even some that live here during the winter but they're not

Ike and Mac

The issue of Britain's military cutbacks is in this class. Macmillan came here determined to tell Eisenhower that because of sagging finances and economic pressure at home, Britain must retrench. The British felt there can be no change in that basic decision.

American officials said the U.S. government recognizes the gravity of Britain's plight but is worried about the effect of the planned cutbacks on the free world's defenses. They think Macmillan is prepared to negotiate the timing and extent of the reductions.

The United States, these officials said, so far has not been fully and officially informed of Britain's plans. Washington knows Britain in the next year will call home some 13,000 of the 80,000 men it has in West Germany, an announced plan.

Qualified informants said Britain also is planning to withdraw most of its 5,000 troops in South Korea, but the United States has not had official information of this, or of what will happen to British commitments in Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaya and Libya.

The Americans do not expect any early British cuts of importance in Cyprus, Malta and Gibraltar. But they want firm information from Macmillan covering all such points.

The British government also has not announced the target of its reduction program. Informants speculate has been that it would like to bring annual defense costs down from 15 billion pounds ($4,200,000,000) to one billion.

Legislature

The Washington Legislature already has voted to ratify the compact.

After the Oregon Legislature approves, then the people of Oregon and Washington must change their state constitutions.

The final step would be approval by Congress.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to permit county courts to vacate county roads that haven't been used by the public for 16 years. It would make possible the abandonment of many such roads.

The Senate sent to the House a bill enacting a complete new code governing operation of cooperatives.

The House Forestry Committee recommended passage of a bill to repeal timber marketing areas. It would eliminate a provision same source in his income tax returns.

"I don't know what this means," Brewster said.

He said he would ask Fred Verschueren, Jr., a Seattle, accountant he said made out the forms, to explain.

Robert F. Kennedy, committee counsel, cautioned Brewster that "if someone goes to jail" for the alleged discrepancy "it will be Frank Brewster" and not the auditor.

"I know that," Brewster said, his forehead wrinkling in an expression of deep concern.

"Isn't it possible that some of that (difference) could be expenses?" he asked.

$11,000 Expenses?
Kennedy asked whether Brewster thought it was either possible or reasonable that his expense accounts to the international union that year could account for the approximately $11,000 difference between two figures on the two reports.

Pierre Salinger, a staff investigator, testified that a check signed by Brewster on the Western Conference's funds was used to buy a car registered in the name of Mary James, Route 1, Bothell, Wash.

Salinger said he found out in a telephone interview with Miss James that the car was purchased for her in June 1954 for $3,115 by Terry McNulty, paid as a union organizer.

There has been previous testimony that McNulty, while carried on the conference's payroll as an organizer, devoted considerable time to Brewster's horse racing stables.

Salinger said McNulty, also interviewed by committee investigators, claimed the price of the car was refunded in cash to the Western Conference. But Salinger said no such amount is shown as an incoming item on the conference's allowing the Forestry Board to designate areas where timber from state forests would have to be processed within the marketing area.

Actually, no such marketing areas ever have been set up. The U. S. Bureau of Land Management is thinking about doing away with similar marketing areas on the Oregon & California grant lands in Western Oregon.

In suggesting the survey, County Engineer John Anderson said that quite frequently he has been confronted with the problem of determining which road should be given preference when two roads apparently are of equal importance.

Engineers to Make Survey

The survey would be made by the engineer's office personnel and no one from the outside would be brought in to do the job.

Matters to be considered in a survey would include a traffic count, the numbers of houses along each road, the type of tonnage involved, the variety of crops and similar essentials.

Also taken into consideration would be whether the road was a feeder to an arterial highway and whether it would provide a connecting link between two other roads.

Worked in Washington
Anderson said a survey, such as he suggested, had been made in Clark County, Washington, by a staff from Washington State College. The report, he added, was one of the best of its kind that he had read.

With the rapid growth of the county, and consequent increased traffic, members of the court have found it difficult to select the roads each year which shall be oil surfaced.

Judge Appointed
W. F. Riddleberger of Eugene has been appointed to act as a pro tem judge for the Marion County Circuit Court for a period of six days beginning April 1. The appointment was made by Wm. C. Perry, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Oregon.

records.

Salinger said McNulty claimed he turned over the money to Gordon Lindsey, former secretary-treasurer of the conference but now deceased.

At the outset of the committee session, Chairman McClellan (D-Ark) read a telegram from Dave Beck, Teamsters Union president, advising that Beck intended to appear before the committee next Tuesday as requested.

Beck said he would bring his financial records "under the provisions of my previous wire."

In the earlier wire, Beck had said he was reserving his constitutional rights.

This left a question whether Beck would turn over his records once he did appear.

McClellan commented that he did not know the meaning of Beck's "reservations."

At Seattle, Beck declined to shed any further light on the exact meaning of his wires.
