JAMESTOWN, Va., March 28 (Special)—When Oregon's Governor Holmes visits the Jamestown Festival in June, he will raise the State's flag over a more finished center than we have been viewing this week. Presently things are in a real hubbub at Jamestown, Williamsburg and Yorktown as committees work frantically to be ready for the Jamestown Festival which officially opens April first. Right now tulips of the long-blooming variety have just popped up their heads around the sunken pools surrounding the reception area and parking lots are a sea of clay. Exhibits in the Old and New World Pavilions are not in place and fascinating boxes are being opened in the gift shops.

There is even the possibility that Governor Holmes and Oregon's First Lady (we hope she will be coming with him) may meet Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip of England. Nobody will say a word officially or off the record of their hoped for visit to America's 350th birthday celebration at Jamestown. However, strong rumors persist that they are coming. Certainly, Her Majesty has shown much interest in this festival which she will see in person. We saw boxes of silver, glass, furniture and books in the wooden crates in which they sailed across the Atlantic waiting to be unpacked for display in the Old World Pavilion. Unpacked was an autographed volume of the works of the 17th Century English composer Henry Purcell. The Duke of Devonshire has loaned his $21,000 Portolan Atlas. The Earl of Warwick contributed a wire-strung instrument called a gittern. A gittern was the first musical instrument to be played in Virginia by the 17th century settlers; and the one loaned by the Earl is valued at $18,000.

At first glance the Jamestown Festival area seems small, accustomed as we are to the large areas that such a festival would cover on the Pacific Coast. Then we remember that when the first band of colonists founded Jamestown in 1607 there were only 105 of them. It didn't take a large area to encompass them. The James Fort of that day with its surrounding wooden fence does not have many colonial houses inside. You feel as if a good high wind could blow any of them over. Ac-

Travels in Pacific Told for Sorority

Mrs. Delbert Schwabauer told of her recent trip to Pacific islands and to the Orient, at the meeting of Gamma Gamma Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority, Monday night. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Ronald Weibe with Mrs. Thomas Adolphson and Mrs. Jerry Bigler as co-hostesses.

George Murphy showed a film on the Orient. Also featured on the program was a display of clothing and articles from Japan. The chapter is to sponsor the blood bank on April 4.

IN EUGENE Friday night for the Matrix Table banquet of University of Oregon chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism sorority, will be Miss Eleanor Stephens and Mrs. Robert Y. Thornton. Spoker is Mrs. David Shaw, who is to tell of her experiences as editor and publisher of the Curry County Reporter.

usually, they were just so built 550 years ago and they withstood the elements. Also, their rude furnishings are identical. On April first, ladies in Elizabethan dress and pikemen will escort visitors about the fort.

One of the exhibits in the New World building which is not yet ready is particularly fascinating. This is a tableau of life-size figures of the seven Virginians who signed the Declaration of Independence. An oil painting of President Eisenhower on loan from the White House will hold a prominent place in this exhibit. Here, too, will be presidents, generals, adventurers and pioneers — all appropriately depicted. The American eagle and Virginia's state flower, the dogwood, decorate glass screens.

Tourists are rolling into Jamestown and probably giving more attention to the historic sites along the Jamestown river than they will when the festival opens. Then the Susan Constant, Godspeed and Discovery that dropped anchor 350 years ago will have returned from their present visit to Washington and the enormous attractions of the festival will take interest from such spots as the old churchyard. Here lies buried the Reverend and Honorable James Blair, first president of William College, and head of the Church of England in Virginia. There will not be time for National Park guides to tell their factual and romantic stories in detail.

We stood in a high wind listening while guide C. W. Warner held a group enthralled by his story of the romance of the Rev. Mr. Blair, 55; and pretty teen-ager, Sarah Harrison of Virginia. Her mother opposed the match because of the difference in age of the couple. She did not want Sarah to marry a man old enough to be her father. "However," said Mr. Warner, "love won out. The couple were wed and lived most happily together." Then he pointed to their tombs next to the site of the 17th century church where the reverend preached. (The original building burned but the tower was preserved.) Between the tombs of James Blair and his wife has grown up a giant tree. Its gnarled roots sharply divide Sarah's tomb from that of her husband and pushes it into the Harrison plot where her mother is buried. "See," pointed out Mr. Warner, "the mother-in-law could see her way in life, but she got it in death!"

Another feature of the Jamestown festival will be a re-enactment of the marriage of the Indian maid, Pocahontas, to John Rolfe, the Virginia planter. Since at this time (1613) Pocahontas had been converted to Christianity and taken the name of Rebecca, Mrs. June Moffatt, who will take the role of Pocahontas, will wear an elaborate gold satin dress encrusted with pearls. James Moffatt as John Rolfe will be in the dress of a southern gentleman of the period. His doublet (jacket) will be of yellow satin and his pants (referred to at that time as slops) will be of green velvet.

The Moffatts are a story in themselves. Married two years ago, they are in the cast of "The Common Glory," the historical play which will start again in Williamsburg June 26. James is a featured actor; June, a dancer. Each is a teacher on the staff of Southern Seminary and Junior College of Buena Vista, Virginia.
