

Woodburn Sets April Date for Hearing on Proposed Zone Law

Measure Awaiting Final Passage Balloting

WOODBURN (Special)—April 25 is the date set tentatively for a public hearing on the proposed Woodburn zoning ordinance during the City Council meeting this week. The meeting is to be held at the city hall at 7:30 p.m. and members of the Planning Commission will be present to answer questions.

The proposed measure, which received its first three readings March 21 and is ready for final passage, would regulate and restrict the location and use of buildings and land in the city. This would be achieved by dividing city zones and setting requirements in each as to height and bulk of buildings, setback lines, minimum size of yards, and auto parking facilities.

Fees Established

Subdivisions of land would be controlled and the measure would provide means of changing regulations when necessary, establish fees and penalties, and recreate the Planning Commission. Existing buildings and usages in the city would not be affected by the ordinance. Copies of the measure and zone maps are available at the city recorder's office.

In other business the council adopted a resolution requesting aid from the state for repairing and improving Cannery street from Young to the south city limits, Park Avenue from Hardcastle to the north city limits, and Settlemier avenue from Harrison to the south city limits. The request was made from an annual fund of $250,000 set up for the State Highway Commission to help where city streets not a part of the state highway system suffer excessive wear due to sudden population growth or unusual industrial traffic.

Specifications Asked
The city engineering firm was instructed to draw up plans, specifications and estimates for the improvement of George, Tomlin and Blaine streets.
