Postal Order To End Some City Sub Work

A general order issued by the postal service concerning curtailment of mail service as of April 13 will mean the limitation of a greater portion of the substitute help at the Salem post office but will not mean the laying off of any of the regular employees.

This is the interpretation placed upon a Post Office Department bulletin received Monday by Postmaster Albert C. Gragg, which deals with the situation arising out of a lack of funds.

Just how many substitute workers would be affected, the postmaster was not in an immediate position to state.

The general order would mean a curtailment in the number of hours worked by the clerk and this would necessitate a rearrangement in the time the windows controlling the sale of stamps, registry, general delivery and the like, said the postmaster.

There will be no deliveries of mail, except special matter, Saturday or Sunday. However, box holders will be able to get mail on these two days.

Officers evacuated the building and began a thorough search after receiving a call the depot would be "blown up by a bomb."

Then the kitchen became filled with smoke and flames. Police rushed in and one patrolman put out the fire before the fire department arrived.

But it wasn't a bomb. The kitchen help, shooed out by police, forgot to cut off the gas in a deep fryer of grease and potatoes. Damage was negligible — and no bomb was found.

Patrolmen Alexander Anthony and Samuel Mostardi found 3-year-old David Hagenbuch on the tracks of the high-speed interurban trolley line.

The dog, a big German shepherd, growled as they tried to approach. The policemen turned and raced along the tracks in time to flag an approaching trolley.

They finally got the dog to move by waving their clubs at him. The youngster was taken to a hospital for treatment of face scratches and a bump on the head suffered when he slipped and fell while walking along the tracks.

Alden Ocean Admits Theft Of Stolz Beer

Confession Clears Up Confusing Case In Salem

The recent stealing and dumping into Shelton Ditch of some 130 cases of beer was cleared Saturday night with a signed statement of a 19-year-old Salem youth admitting that he did it, city police reported.

Alden Wilbur Ocean, 180 N. 23rd St., told officers that he was on his way home about midnight last Tuesday when he decided to enter the Gideon Stolz warehouse in search of some beer. He found some clearance under the door to a garage and scooped it out so that he could slip under, he said.

After prying the lock from a truck, he opened the barred garage doors and carried a case of beer across the street to Shelton Ditch and tossed it in the water. It floated, he noted, so he went back for some more cases and then decided to empty the truck.

He estimated he made 65 to 70 trips from the garage to the creek and carried more than 120 cases of beer. All of it was tossed in the creek except three cases, which he hid under a log, he said. He quit when it began to get daylight about 5:30 a.m.

Gideon Stolz employees cleared out the creek Wednesday, recovering most of the beer which had sunk to the bottom when the boxes collapsed. He went back Thursday and Friday nights and entered the water to come up with approximately four cases of beer, Ocean said.

Police said they would obtain a Marion County District Court burglary warrant Monday.

70 MPH Isn't Freeway Top, Holmes Says

Gov. Robert D. Holmes said Monday that 70 miles an hour on the Salem-Portland freeway is not a speed limit and that the basic speed applies to those driving the freeway.

The comment arose when a Portland newsman asked the Governor if he had been in a Cadillac bearing No. 1 Oregon license plates. This car had passed the newsman who said he was driving at 70 miles an hour. The Governor said he was riding in the car.

"My driver always observes the basic speed law," the Governor said. "I did not know that 70 miles an hour on the speedway was not a limit until I was assigned a state policeman as a driver."

"He informed me that the 70 miles an hour posted on the freeway was merely a suggested speed for all cars under all conditions."

Gov. Holmes said when he was personally driving, he drove considerably slower.

"Having driven more than a half million miles in Oregon and having observed many accidents," the Governor said, "I'm inclined to be a slow driver."

SUGGESTS CONFERENCE Road Width Decision Necessary—Anderson

That there should be some determination concerning the width of North River road in the Keizer area was the gist of a communication directed to the Marion County Court Monday by Engineer John Anderson.

The map of the County Planning Commission shows a width of North River road to be 100 feet as projected into the not too distant future.

"I have been unable to reconcile myself to telling various builders that this is actually what is going to happen," commented the engineer as he suggested a conference between members of the court and the commission concerning some of the more important arterials.

Anderson said that he has tried to stress to prospective builders that the North River road is to be widened in the near future and that they should govern themselves accordingly.

In this connection the engineer relates that representatives of an oil company recently conferred with him concerning the construction of a filling station on the southwest corner of Cummings lane and North River road.

He advised them that they should provide for additional setbacks of 10 feet from the property lines on both streets and that an 80-foot right-of-way was all that could ultimately be hoped for.

The engineer points out that there is no legal way of enforcing such setbacks and all that he can do is to suggest them.

Revenue Office Slates Move For Early July

The Salem office of the federal Internal Revenue Service, which has always been located in the downtown district.

This became known Monday when the Chamber of Commerce received copy of a call for bids by the federal General Services Administration which handles all rentals for the government.

A location with space of not less than 2,350 square feet is desired. A building either with elevator service or where space can be had on the street floor is needed.

Stair Climbing Difficult
The reason for this is that many aged persons, who have business with the office, find difficulty in climbing stairs as they have to do at the post office.

Bids will be received by the General Services Administration at 909 First Ave., Seattle, up to 2 p.m. April 25.

Another reason for moving is that because of expansion of the office in the last three years, it does not now have enough space. Personnel in the office has increased from 8 to 15 in the three years.

The office has what is known in the service as a Class A collection unit. It covers all of northwest Oregon except Multnomah and part of Washington County, extending from the coast eastward to Bend and as far south as the Lane County line.

Four Men in Salem
The unit has four men in Salem and one each at Bend, Astoria, Tillamook, Newport and Hillsboro. The group supervisor is in Salem. Three girls do the tabulating in the Salem office.

In addition is an audit section staff covering Marion, Linn, Polk, Benton and Lincoln counties and part of Yamhill.

Hugh E. Adams is the internal revenue agent in charge here.
