Huggins Asks Check Charge Penalty Drop

Oregon could cut its prison population substantially by reducing the crime of writing bad checks from a felony to a misdemeanor, the House State and Federal Affairs Committee was told Wednesday.

The statement was made by state Parole Board chairman Charles Huggins at a hearing on a bill to provide salaries for the unpaid three-man Parole Board. Huggins, asserting that bad checks are misdemeanors in California, said most check writers are harmless, and that many of them do their check writing after they get drunk.

A felony is punishable by prison sentence, while persons convicted of misdemeanors go to county jails. Huggins and L. W. Mallett, another Parole Board member, opposed the salary bill on the ground it would cost too much money.

Legislature

The Senate also sent to the House a bill to make it illegal for motor vehicle drivers to drive so slowly on main highways as to impede traffic.

Sen. Jean Lewis (D), Portland, author of the bill, said it would reduce head-on collisions which are caused when impatient drivers try to pass the slow drivers.

Another bill approved by the Senate provides that the state Board of Census shall make annual population estimates for counties. These counts now are made only for cities. The bill goes to the House. It also changes the date for the annual estimates from April 25 to Sept. 25.

Its purpose is to make fast-growing counties eligible for increased state allotments of funds.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to increase from $500 to $750 the annual amount that the state gives to each blind student for higher education.

The House and Senate Highway committees introduced a resolution to continue the Highway Interim Committee for two more years.
