Elmer Deetz, Canby dairy farmer who led battle for repeal of state milk control law couple years ago and was elected to House for one session was victim of some kind of hoax or mix-up last week.

Registered letter notified the Deetzes that a supply of steel was being delivered to their farm for construction of a swimming pool. The Deetzes had no plans, desire or use for a swimming pool so immediately phoned the Portland Steel company on whose letterhead the letter was written and asked what was going on.

The company had no record of such an order and said maybe someone made a mistake. But that wasn't likely, Deetz pointed out, because the letter had a complete legal description of the farm, and the correct address on the envelope. A check with the pools also showed no such order on hand.

At any rate no truckload of on hand.

At any rate no truckload of atcel showed up and Deetz doesn't know if the letter was someone's idea of a joke or if he was supposed to be the middleman in an "unordered merchandise" racket. In the latter legitimate company is ordered to deliver something to an address. Few minutes later another truck. Few minutes later another truck picks it up as it was delivered by mistake." Second truck, of course, makes off with free merchandise (a truckload of steel this case) sored by service clubs and some other organizations. In discussing the show last year, Robert Hullette, River Days president, declared that much of its success came as a result of advance ticket sales and cited the work done by Ed Taggert, Bob Elgin, Hal Lehman, Cecil Head and John McElhenny of the Joint Presidents Council of the Oregon State Employes Assn.

The management has this in mind for this year by planning to rely on advance ticket sales. The ways and means committee, headed by Jim Daniels and assisted by Don Simmons, is in charge of ticket sales.
