Two Firms to Build Vacuums For Airfields
WASHINGTON (AP)—Two companies announced plans Tuesday to build a giant-size vacuum sweeper to keep airfields clean for jet airplanes.

The announcement, by Coleman Engineering Co. of Los Angeles and Fruehauf Trailer Co. of Detroit, said Boeing Airplane Co. of Seattle, has purchased the first commercial production model. The device will be used by Boeing's Transport Division plant at Renton, Wash., where the 707 jet airliner and the Air Force KC135 jet tanker are being built. Coleman developed the airfield vacuum cleaner in an Air Force competition for a solution to the problem of airfield debris. The Air Force has estimated that the suction of stones, bits of metal and other objects into jet engines causes 25 million dollars worth of damage a year and creates a hazard for pilots. Mounted on a standard truck body and powered by a regular truck engine, the device was designed to clean as much as one million square feet of airfield an hour operating at a speed of 25 miles an hour.

Salmon Boats Await Setting Of New Price

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Salmon boats stayed in most California harbors Monday, opening of the season, while their representatives dickered with buyers over prices. The asked price was 45 cents a pound for large salmon, 36 for medium and 32 for small. At Monterey and Moss Landing, only a few of 100 boats went out because these fishermen, independents, were waiting for the price to be set through the San Francisco negotiations. None of the approximately 200 salmon boats basing at Eureka left port. Fishermen operating off the extreme Northern California coast were reported asking a price scale ranging from 30 cents a pound for small salmon to 45 cents for large king salmon. One Eureka area spokesman observed that the price dickering occurred virtually every spring. He said he could not recall a salmon season when fishing boats went out on opening day.

Norway Tells Russ It Won't Leave NATO

OSLO (AP)—Norway has told the Soviet Union that membership in NATO is a vital part of Norwegian policy for obtaining peace and security and it has no intention of quitting the Western defense alliance. Moscow was given that word in reply to its threat that establishment of NATO guided missile and atomic weapon bases in Norway would bring atomic destruction in the event of war. The 2,100-word message from Premier Einar Gerhardsen was delivered in Moscow Saturday and made public here last night. Gerhardsen did not mention the possibility of NATO's equipping Norwegian forces with guided missiles and atomic weapons, but his letter to Soviet Premier Bulganin said Norway is carrying out its policy of not letting foreign forces be stationed on its soil in peacetime. Gerhardsen said Soviet warnings that Norway might, "as a consequence of her membership in NATO," be forced to have foreign forces or weapons stationed on her territory against her will "can only be due to a misunderstanding." "It is Norway's constitutional bodies which will at any time decide whether our country is exposed to a threat of attack," the Premier declared.
