

Solons Back Labor's Jobless Benefit Bill

By PAUL W. HARVEY Jr., Associated Press Writer

Efforts to compromise the Oregon Legislature's problem of unemployment compensation failed Monday night.

The Senate Labor and Industries Committee, which has studied the question for three months, split 4-3 along party lines in recommending passage of labor's bill to boost jobless benefits and employer contributions.

The bill, which the Democrats on the prevailing side—means the bill is in for some hard going when it reaches the evenly divided Senate.

OHMART UPSETS PACT
A subcommittee, consisting of Sens. Dan Dimick (D), Roseburg, and Rudie Wilhelm (R), Portland, submitted a compromise to the committee.

Then Sen. Lee Ohmart (R), of Salem, submitted amendments that would eliminate some seasonal workers, and the Democrats said this violated a committee agreement to accept the compromise.

The Democrats then went for labor's bill, which had a recommendation by the subcommittee that it be modified.

The labor bill would increase maximum weekly jobless benefits from $35 to $40, and extend coverage to employers of one person.

The changes, with other liberalized provisions, would mean total annual benefit payments of $25,200,000 a year, or $1,800,000 more than now is being paid out.

The employer contribution rate, now running from 3 to 3 per cent of payroll, would be jumped to a scale of .9 to 2.7 per cent.

BIG EMPLOYER RAISE
Employers, who now contribute more than 17 millions a year, would find their tax bill jumped to $25,200,000.

The net effect of the bill would be a $3,908,000 annual excess of income over cost, which would build up the shrinking unemployment trust fund.

Employers and Labor agreed to the employer contribution rates in the subcommittee's compromise.

The Legislature got some good news when the state Tax Commission reported that the general fund surplus will amount to $36,800,000 at the end of the biennium on July 1. This means that the Legislature has $4,100,000 more than it thought it had.

The Senate passed and sent to the Governor a bill to make it illegal for a party line telephone user to fail to give up the line when somebody else needs it in an emergency. The maximum penalty would be a year in jail and $500 fine.

Ways-Means Okays Meat Check Funds

Approval of a bill appropriating $400,000 to inaugurate a compulsory statewide meat inspection program was recommended by the Joint Ways and Means Committee Monday.

The bill originally provided for $516,000. The House voted Monday for a companion measure that would require meat producers to pay 20 per cent of the cost of the program.

The 1955 Legislature doubled the license fee of meat producers to help pay for a pilot inspection program. But the 1957 Legislature is considering legislation to restore the former license schedule.

The committee amended a proposal to discontinue the Eastern Oregon Tuberculosis Hospital at The Dalles or the University Tuberculosis Hospital in Portland, or both, by adding a provision referring it to the people.

PATIENTS DECLINING
Sen. Howard C. Belton (R), of Canby, said the number of patients at both hospitals is declining and that the state hospital in Salem probably could handle all of the patients in the other two hospitals.

Belton pointed out that the hospital at The Dalles will be set up in the next biennium for only 50 patients.

Sen. Jean Lewis (D), Portland, urged the committee to consider use of either hospital as a correctional institution for women if the voters approve their discontinuance.

FLOOD CONTROL CASH
The committee approved an appropriation of $25,000 to help the state Water Resources Board maintain flood control projects built by Army Engineers.

The committee was told that some communities have been unable to maintain projects, and that the state would have to assist if they were to be kept up.

Hay dealers would have to post a $1,000 bond and pay a $10 yearly license under a House-approved bill recommended by the committee. It is aimed at transient dealers.

JORDAN CRISIS AFTERMATH Egypt-Syria Isolation Due In New Arab Power Lineup

By WALTER LOGAN, United Press Staff Correspondent

Middle East dispatches hinted today at a new alignment of power that might leave Egypt and Syria isolated from the other Arab nations.

Egypt's semi-official Middle East News Agency reported from Damascus that Jordan, Iraq and Saudi Arabia are contemplating the creation of a new three-power pact.

Iraq is now a member of the Baghdad Pact, Jordan and Saudi Arabia are linked with Egypt and Syria in a four-power military alliance.

The Middle East News Agency said Jordan—which rejected the Baghdad Pact following nationwide rioting last year—is trying to persuade Iraq to quit the Baghdad Pact.

There was no confirmation of the reports, but King Saud of Saudi Arabia is paying a state visit to King Faisal of Iraq within a few days and King Hussein will follow up the visit by going to Baghdad a few days later.

Any such realignment would result in large part from King Hussein's government crisis in which pro-Soviet Syrian leaders gave refuge to Jordanian military leaders since denounced as "traitors" and Cairo Radio kept up steady streams of propaganda to bolster Hussein's left-wing political opponents.

A Cairo dispatch reported today that two of the ousted leaders had gone there from Damascus—Maj. Gen. Ali Abu Nuwar and Maj. Gen. Ali Hiyayri. Nuwar was ousted as chief of staff at start of the Jordan crisis; Hiyayri, his successor, then fled to Syria.

United Press correspondent Jor Morris reported from Amman today that diplomats there said the isolating of Syria and Egypt from the other Arab nations had been one of the major results of the Mideast mission of U.S. Special Envoy James P. Richards.
