THIS SURE IS SOME weather we are having, all winter long we had mild weather when we should have had that well needed snow and rain. Just the other day we were having snow storms up in the hills. It was reported that snow this time of the year would be of just a little help if any at all toward the drought condition that exists here on the reservation. For a while it appeared that one could jump across the stream that flows through Warm Springs, but lately since we have had some snow and rain it shows that the creek flow rose quite a bit.

TO THE MEMBERS OF the Lions Club, remember that your dues are due again for the remainder of the year. It was stressed by the club officers that there are some of the members who have not yet paid for the first half, that would be from January 1st to May 31st. Your dues will cover the period of June 1st to Dec. 31st, 1977.

It was also mentioned that those who have not paid as of May 27th their names will be removed from the membership roll. So gang, get on the stick and pay your dues as soon as possible.

ON MAY 2ND THE WATER BOARD had a meeting to discuss the possibility of installing a water permit system here on the reservation. The main purpose of the permit system would be for water inventory, water that is being used for Industry, Irrigation, domestic, fish and wildlife and livestock. Also mentioned in the meeting was the position of a water master.

THERE WAS THIS guy who came into town in Montana, he sees this old Indian sitting in front of the general store. He goes over to him and asks, do you know where I can find a taxidermist? The old Indian asks "What is a Taxidermist?" The guy said, you know those guys that mount animals. Oh! I know, only here we call them sheep herders . . . Yikes.

A TRIBAL ATTORNEY WAS VISITING an Indian reservation and the Chief was to show him around. So they saddled up their horses and started out into the country, they came to a cave, the Chief dismounts goes to the cave entrance and yells "Wooo, Wooo", stands there for a moment, doesn't hear a sound so he mounts up again rides on, they come upon another cave, the Chief dismounts goes to the entrance and yells, "Wooo, Wooo", stands there for a moment again he don't hear an answer, so he mounts up and they ride on, they ride on and come to another cave and the Chief does the same thing he yells into the cave, and still no answer. It was getting late and the chief tells the Attorney if he would go straight over the hill he would come out where his car was parked. The Attorney was curious to know why the Chief was yelling into the caves, so he asked the Chief. The Chief tells him that there was a legend of a beautiful girl that lived in one of the caves and if you are lucky you might be the first to find her.

Ah! says the Tribal Attorney, he leaves the Chief and on the way back to his car he passes this cave, dismounts goes to the entrance and yells, "Wooo, Wooo," he stands there for a moment and hears a faint sound of "Wooo, Wooo," "Yikes" this is my lucky day, and goes running into the cave.

The next day the headlines of the paper read, Tribal Attorney ran over by a train . . .

A guy rushing to work one morning had a flat tire in front of a mental hospital. He gets out of the car, jacks it up and takes off the lugs palced them in the hub cap of the wheel, and while he pulled the tire off the wheel he hit the hub cap and overturning it which threw the lugs into the street water drain, he stood there for some time trying to figure a way to get the lugs out of the drain. Finally he hears a voice from up above, because all the time he had the flat tire there was a patient watching him and saw what had happened; the patient shouted to the frustrated driver, and said, "why don't you take one lug from each wheel and by that you can go to the garage and get another set of lugs.

The driver said to the patient, you seem to be quite intelligent, what are you doing in place like this? The Patient answered, "You don't have to be dumb or stupid to be crazy . . . Yikes.

Roman Suppah needed a little help maneuvering in his astronaut's suit at a recent NASA demonstration at the Warm Springs grade school. Students listened eagerly as the NASA representative Bill Horvath explained that Roman could be heated or cooled through his underwear, made of yards of plastic tubes through which water is pumped. Horvath also demonstrated computer guidance systems for spacecraft.
