2. Finally! Rural Water

1. Tradition marked the dedication ceremony for the new Tribal Administration Building June 28, a very hot and windy day. Tribal elders took part in the formal blessing and Aurolyn Stwyer, Miss Warm Springs, performed the Lord's Prayer to open the program. The new center has helped centralize offices and departments which were previously spread throughout the campus area.

2. Dramatized by drought conditions, the need for a domestic water system for the Simnasho-Schoolie Flat area became a top priority consideration in 1977. The long discussed project was approved overwhelmingly by voters in a September 15 election, and work began on October 17.

Another area of community development which was a top priority concern was housing. Several projects were begun in 1977 and should be ready for occupancy in 1978.

3. Traditional dancing found a place at powwows last year. Pi-Ume-Sha held its first straight dance contests and Gorky Mitchell, Bogene Ortiz and Carl Tewee were cheered on by Thanksgiving Mini-Powwow crowds.

4. Eugene Greene (Chairman), Delbert Frank, Sr. (Vice-Chairman), Karen Wallulatum, Jacob Frank, Sr., and Larry Calica joined ongoing councilmen Elmer Quinn, Zane Jackson, Rita Squiempfen, Nick Kalama, Nelson Wallulatum and Amos Simustus in the swearing-in ceremony at the new Tribal Council chambers. The new Council's policy is to get information to the people.

5&6 One of the driest years in recent history ironically ended with a flood. As springs dried up and the range grass disappeared, many ranchers resorted to emergency feeding. Then, following a near-record pre-Thanksgiving snowfall, rain and warm winds combined to create serious flooding. Josie and Julia Wolfe's house in Greenville was claimed by the flood, almost as if the elements were aware of the clearance project.

9. A new tribal enterprise, the Information Center Gift Shop, opened for business in mid February. Faye Waheneka and Merle Kalama took inventory and priced items in preparation for the Grand Opening which was held in March.

8. Portland Trail Blazer Bill Walton was the center of attention July 29 and 30 when he came to Warm Springs to conduct a two-day basketball clinic in connection with Camp Ny-Mu-Mah. Walton's easy manner with kids has won him the admiration and respect of many.

10. The girls White Buffaloes went literally from the unknown to the spotlight in 1977 when they finished the season with a 22-1 record, and captured the State AA basketball title. Kim Manion and Fran Moses were both chosen All-Tourney, Kim to the first team and Fran to the second.

11. People were asking about the condition of each other's bones last fall after the enthusiastic reception given the feature-length movie "Three Warriors," filmed on the reservation and premiered for the Tribes in Bend November 12.
