College Students Increase

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (Pueblo News) — Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) statistics show that more Indian students are going to college than ever before and are entering a wider variety of fields.

BIA scholarship grants are awarded to 24,000 Indian students attending more than 500 universities and colleges across the country, reflecting the largest amount of students funded in the Bureau's history, BIA acting director for post-secondary programs, Leroy Falling, reported.

Although education, the social sciences and business are the most popular fields of study among Indian students nationally, many are pursuing degrees in over 100 fields, Falling pointed out. He named political science, environmental sciences, engineering, mining and hydrology as areas of increasing interest to Indian students.

Five fields identified in critical need of Indian professionals include medicine, law, engineering, business administration, and forestry and forestry-related he reported.

Congress has appropriated $500,000 a year for "incentive awards" for students interested in those five fields, he said. The grants, intended to replace work-study programs and loans, are awarded to about 500 students from among the BIA area offices, he said.
