

Kids delight in two spring traditions

Every culture has its spring traditions and Warm Springs is lucky enough to enjoy two of them. While Headstart classes ventured out to Webster Flats to gather piaksi and luksh, other youngsters were decorating and hunting for Easter eggs.

Chips Kalama did all the work while classmates checked out the bushes for more roots. Many kids had never seen roots before and were finding "roots" in the most unlikely places. Some roots were peeled right away while others waited in bags as kids broke for lunch.

The painstaking efforts of Virgil Orange, Jr. went into somebody's Easter basket after hiding out in the Community Center grass for a time. One particularly "ugly" egg won a prize in the decorating contest that attracted twenty-five kids and their artistic abilities.

Root photos
by Cynthia Stowell

Egg photos
by Donna Behrend

