COCC seeks Warm Springs support

The 1980-81 Central Oregon Community College operating levy will be voted on Tuesday, March 25, in all areas of the COCC district.

Because the 30-year old College has no tax base, COCC needs voter approval of the local share of its general fund budget each year. The operating levy represents about half (49 percent) of the money needed to run College programs in Bend at its nine community education centers throughout the district during the coming year.

COCC currently enrolls about 1,500 full-time students and in addition serves some 3,500 area residents through community education programs offered in Bend at the College's nine centers outside of Bend. COCC is expecting about a 5 percent growth in full-time students next year.

During fall term this year, 160 Warm Springs residents took either credit or non-credit classes offered by COCC.

The total budget for operations for next year stands at $5,929,043. The local tax portion on which district residents will ballot stands at $2,852,524.

The levy rate the College estimates will be necessary to generate the local revenue portion of the budget is $1.20 per $1,000. The rate is unchanged from the rate which voters approved for the College last year.

The total budget amount represents a 12.9 percent increase over last year's operating budget. COCC has cited a 14.3 percent inflation figure, rising energy costs, payroll expenses and the cost of equipping the new science-nursing building now under construction as contributing to the general fund increase.

The budget is based on an expected enrollment for next year of about 1,500 students. In addition, COCC estimates that it will enroll nearly 3,000 part-time and community education students per term during that period.

In all, COCC expects more than 10,000 students to take one or more classes next year. That would be an increase of 1,000 students over the current year.

TOE NESS

THERE WERE THESE three guys who were the only ones to cross the Atlantic in a balloon. They should be commended because next year they have a more dangerous stunt to do. Next year they will try to cross Hollywood boulevard in a PINTO! YIKES

TWO GUYS ARRIVED at the Kah-Nee-Ta golf course for an early round of golf here recently. The first one stepped up to the tee, took a mighty swing, and made a startling hole-in-one. The second man, glancing at his friend's achievement, stepped up to his ball and said: "All right! Now I'll take my practice swing and then we'll start the game." YIKES

"A PERSON WITH AN hour to kill usually wants to spend it with someone who can't spare a minute."

MR. "E" SAID, "OUR NEW tenants must think I'm a weatherman." His secretary replies, "What makes you think so?" Mr. "E" replies, "They wanted to know how much longer the roof is going to leak." YIKES

A STUDENT CONFRONTS HIS professor by stating, "It says here if we study hard, don't drink or smoke or run around with girls we'll live longer. Is it true?" The professor says, "We won't know for sure until somebody tries it." YIKES

IN THIS KINDERGARTEN CLASS the teacher was giving a class lesson on the ten commandments, and asked, "Can anyone give me a commandment with only four words in it?" This little boy immediately stood up and said, "Keep off the grass." YIKES
