Police lead runners astray

Seven runners competing in the Pi-Ume-Sha day 8.2 mile run returned to the starting point before they had completed the course. Escorted by members of the Warm Springs police department, the runners who were unfamiliar with the area followed the official vehical back to the Community Center instead of going on the Deschutes Crossing where the course then turned back.

The police escort had been given an inaccurate map of the course and went by it taking the runners back before the run was complete. Jerry Sampson, who knew the correct course, led those who were behind him in the right direction.

The first seven runners crossing the finish line expressed disappointment when they found that they had not completed the run.
