

Energy abounds at this year's Pi-Ume-Sha

The Pi-Ume-Sha parade featured devil dancers who were practiced in keeping the children in line by scaring the heck out of them.

The highlight of the Pi-Ume-Sha days celebration was Wasco dancing. The seldom seen cougar dance pictured here opened the presentation with Chief Nelson Wallulatum leading this and various other Wasco dances.

Special guest Governor Victor Atiyeh visited with folks throughout the celebration. He showed interest in various crafts including corn husk bags. Intrigued by the design on Lillie Heath's bag he talks to her about it. Atiyeh spends his craft time whittling which he did a little of while wandering around the Pi-Ume-Sha grounds.

Master of ceremonies Nathan Jim was at the microphone from dawn through half the night. He still had enough energy to join in the "slow motion with instant replay" dance on Sunday.

Fascinated by it all Gibby Kalama, Jr. holds on to his roach when the afternoon wind picked up.

During one of the fun dances, men donned the ladies' shawls for a graceful war dance and women borrowed bustles to perform the men's war dance.
