Indian art on display at Jr. High

American Indian art is no longer displayed merely as cultural artifacts. It is recognized now as being art in a high order, appreciated by many.

Contemporary Indian Art is a medium by which Native American people are able to express their concerns about politics and economics. It also involves a growing concern for the resurrection of Native identity and tribal loyalty.

There is a noticeable reversion to traditional arts and crafts, even with the use of modern materials. In this way the Native American artist can express new thoughts based on tradition. Neither is forgotten.

The Institute of American Indian Arts has brought an exhibit to Madras Junior High which reflects many thoughts and ideas of Native American people. The art exhibit entitled "One with the Earth" exhibits the creative and aesthetic beauty of Native American arts and crafts. The exhibit is sponsored by the Madras Junior High Culture Club.

Visitors are able to see the display and may contact principal Jan Dobry at 475-7253. Evenings appointments can be made.

AMERICAN INDIAN ART IN PERSPECTIVE—Students are able to get an overview of contemporary Indian art at an exhibit displayed in the Madras Junior High library through the month of November. The public is invited to view the display.
