Judging will be based upon dress (regalia) and on dancing ability. Since the contestants

For further information, contact Carol at the Community Center.

The day following Valentine's Day is a tribal holiday so

The time and place have not yet been confirmed but notices will be posted to keep the public informed. So, keep your calendar open.

Second Auction— Lincoln's Birthday Powwow

A second auction to help raise money for the Lincoln's Birthday Powwow is scheduled to be held on January 31. Along with the regular adult auction a mini-auction will be held so children get a chance to bid on items.

The first auction held on January 10 was very successful. The auction along with a baked food sale and weekly mini-affle following Washut services has brought in approximately $1300 to be used as prize money during the powwow.

The mini-affle held Sunday at the Simnasho Longhouse is sponsored by the Lincoln's Birthday Powwow committee. Tickets are 25 cents or 5 for $1.00 and the drawing takes place the same day.

Tickets for the main raffle to take place during the Lincoln's Birthday Powwow are now on sale. They may be purchased from Becky Danzuka, Sara Scott, Melva Tanewasha or Irma Juanita for $1.00 per ticket.

Items to be raffled include: an Atari masterunit, shell dress, beaded items, shawls, pendleton blankets, turquoise jewelry, moccasins, star quilt, buckskin gloves, vests, hair furs, a radio and other items.

Anyone wishing to contribute raffle or auction items may do so by contacting Charlotte Herkshan at 553-1161, Ext. 215 or Kate Jackson at 553-1161, Ext. 270. All donations are appreciated.

IHS names new director

Dr. Everett R. Rhoades, a Kiowa physician, has been appointed as the new director of the Indian Health Service (IHS). He will assume the position February 1.

In his capacity as IHS Director, Rhoades will be responsible for the operation of a comprehensive health system that provides care to more than 700,000 American Indian and Alaska Native people. The total program employs about 10,700 persons and has an operating budget of approximately $650 million.

Rhoades indicated that while it will probably take some time to develop any specific new policies within the IHS program, he will assume the position with a basic philosophy of working "to assume that every Indian man, woman and child is receiving the best health care possible."

Two major initiatives could be undertaken to help achieve this goal, he said. The first would be to improve the working conditions for health professionals within the Indian Health Service. Rhoades said his own medical background provides him with an insight into the problems faced by doctors and nurses, who he said often feel neglected by the bureaucracy. "By making the Indian Health Service a better place to work, we can improve the health services to Indian people," he said.

Tribal involvement in the health delivery system is a second area where services can be improved, and Rhoades maintained that tribes, where appropriate, should be given the opportunity to deliver health services as provided for in the Indian Self Determination Act.

Having served as a Kiowa tribal councilman and tribal vice-chairman, Rhoades said he is sensitive to the needs of tribal government and hoped to work closely with tribes in the future. "Tribes are presently in a very fragile position, and I would like to see the Indian Health Service assist in tribal development where possible," he said.

As the first Indian chosen to serve as IHS Director, Rhoades said he feels he is "representing all Indian people in this appointment. I feel a tremendous responsibility to conduct myself in a way the Indian people and the Indian leadership would want."
