Neda Wesley correctly identified the location of the last geo-quiz as being on highway 3 on the south entrance of Indian Head Canyon. She stated it was quite easy as the "Wise Old Owl" rock formation was the clue. Call Spilyay Tymoo with the correct location of the new quiz and win a year's subscription for yourself or a friend.

Civil Rights update. . .

Federal Response to battered woman

Police officers, prosecutors and judges too often treat spouse abuse as a private family matter rather than a crime. This is the key conclusion of Under the Rule of Thumb, a report by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights released January 19.

Federal Response to Battered Women, a second Commission report released at the same time, describes the range and flexibility of Federal resources available to state and local groups to combat domestic violence and respond to the needs of abused women.

Under the Rule of Thumb says shelters for female victims of domestic violence are needed to provide temporary safety and support so that victims can begin to utilize the criminal justice system. Nevertheless, certain police practices and informal procedures used by prosecutors tend to screen out spouse abuse cases.

In the case of pretrial diversion programs, the Commission found that "Such informal settings tend to produce an atmosphere of fear and coercion for abuse victims, frequently result in no criminal action against defendants and minimize any implication of wrongdoing by abusers."

The Commission said that some local prosecutors' offices have successfully started using some alternative methods for dealing with women abuse cases, such as victim advocate services. It adds that "Mandatory counseling for spouse abusers can be effective, especially after conviction when the counseling is a condition for probation."

The report also concludes that "pretrial diversion programs are inappropriate in cases involving serious or repeated physical violence, and recommends that "Probation violations should result in immediate revocation of probation."
