

Water supply good for summer months

The snowpack for areas affecting Warm Springs' water supplies is well above average according to water master Deepak Sehgal. Warm Springs can expect to have a sufficient amount of water to meet the needs throughout the summer months.

From collected snow survey data Sehgal has predicted a quantity of water 19 by 10,000 cubic feet per second. This is 124% above the average for this area. Snowpack, too, "is well above average," comments Sehgal.

Last year by the same method using snowpack data Sehgal predicted 12.6 by 10,000 cubic feet per second to be available. The total turned out to be close.

If estimates are correct, water run-off will not only easily accomodate Warm Springs water needs but will also be good for fish runs, says Sehgal. The quantity of water in streams will be adequate and streams will easily remain cold.

As for the rest of the state, the "Water Supply Outlook and Summary for Oregon" states, "Water supplies will be very good for most of the state this summer. Streamflow in much of the area west of the Cascades will be above average. East of the Cascades, the streamflow ranges from above average in the north half to much above average in the southern half. The snowpack is generally above average west of the Cascades and much above average east of the Cascades. Reservoir storage is above average for most of the state."

Miss Indian Northwest

"I am honored that I'll be able to represent all the northwest tribes and I'll do the best I can to represent the northwest." These were the words spoken by the new Miss Indian Northwest 1982, Miss Trudee Clements of Warm Springs, following her selection on the evening of May 8.

The contest and ceremonies at Portland State University leading to the selection of Miss Indian Northwest was the twelfth such event held annually. This year it was held prior to the Rose Festival celebration thereby increasing attendance according to coordinator Barbara Farmer.

A panel of five judges selected the girl they thought would best represent all the northwest tribes. Through demonstrations of both modern and traditional skills the girls were judged on poise, speaking ability, knowledge of tribal background, personality and Indian dancing.

The girl selected, Trudee Anne Clements, is the daughter of Rudy and Anna Clements of Warm Springs. She is 20 years of age. Trudee's tribal affiliation is Warm Springs/Wasco/Paiute. In 1981, she was selected to represent Warm Springs as Miss Warm Springs. Also, the same year, Trudee was selected as runner-up in the Miss Indian America pageant.

Trudee's skill demonstrations leading to her selection as Miss Indian Northwest included a speech entitled "Year of the American Eagle" and a traditional skit in which
