

Camp Naami Tamanwit offers two sessions

Traditions and crafts often fall by the wayside as modernization and urbanization become prevalent. This is true with life on the Warm Springs reservation.

In an attempt to keep the lore alive, an Indian culture camp is being held for the second year in Warm Springs. It is aimed at children 7-14 years of age.

Two, three-week sessions are scheduled. The first session will run from Monday, June 21 to July 9. The second session runs from July 12 to July 30. The sessions are held from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., Monday and Thursday.

A $5.00 registration fee is charged for insurance coverage and the cost of Camp Naami Tamanwit T-shirt. Forms will be sent home with students at school or may be picked up at the Warm Springs elementary school.

Director for the camp this year is Geneva Smith. Assistant director is Tommy Kalama.

The crafts to be taught during the two camp sessions include: Basket weaving, rootbag making, moss gathering, wing dress making, shawl making, vest making, beadwork, tanning hides, cutting, drying and cooking meat, fish and eels, featherwork, breastplate making, social dressing, making bustles and roaches, making chokers, drumming and singing, and legends and story telling.

Indian language will be emphasized throughout both camp sessions.

The Naami Tamanwit culture camp is funded through Title IV, Part A. The approximate cost according to Warm Spring elementary principal John Trujillo is $20 thousand.

Grimm—continued from page 3

Q: Did you ever drink?

A: Yes, I've had a few drinks but never to a point where I couldn't control myself.

Q: How old are you?

A: 37

Q: Did you ever drink when you lost a game?

A: Yes, but I didn't drink because I lost a game. Just because someone has had a drink doesn't mean they have done something wrong. It's when they abuse it that it is wrong.

Q: Have you ever had your helmet broken?

A: Yes, twice.

Q: What was it like to be famous?

A: I don't think about notoriety or fame. I just feel real good about what I've done athletically. It's not important to tell others. It is self-satisfying.

Q: Have you ever gotten into a tight in a game?

A: No, that's the worst thing you can do. It will detract from the performance of the game.

Q: What kind of exercise did you do when you played football?

A: The one thing I did the most of was run, and I lifted weights.

Q: What was the most exciting game you played in and why?

A: The 1967 college all-star game against the Green Bay Packers. It was exciting meeting Vince Lombardi and playing that game.

In closing Grimm told the students that if they were really interested in getting involved in athletics, "You owe it to yourself not to get involved in drugs and alcohol." He encouraged the youngsters to learn about these things through questions rather than experimenting, remembering the use of drugs and alcohol are detrimental to each person both in the classroom and athletics.
