

Investigation uncovers illegal fishing scam

Following a 14-month undercover investigation by state and federal agencies, authorities seized evidence June 17 in what officials say was a scheme to illegally catch and sell at least 53 tons of Columbia River salmon, steelhead and sturgeon. This seizure may lead to court action, according to officials.

Officials searched the residence of David Sohappy Sr. and a nearby mobile home in Cook's Landing, Washington. Warrants were used to also search seven vehicles. An affidavit filed in federal court said the trucks were suspected of having been used to transport the illegally caught fish. A search warrant was also served on the Season Fish Company in Kelso, Washington.

No arrests were made, but the affidavit said more than 70 people may have been involved in the scheme.

The investigation, according to a special agent in charge of the National Fisheries Service Northwest enforcement branch, verified officials' belief that illegal fishing has been a major factor in the loss of adult salmon from the Columbia River between Bonneville and McNary dams. It was reported that in 1981, 40,000 adult fall chinook salmon were unaccounted for.

The investigation began in April 1981 at the request of state Department of Fisheries to document the number of salmon taken illegally and to identify illegal commercial markets for fish.

Reports say that during the investigation agents documented the illegal capture, possession and sale of about 53 tons of fish, with transactions totalling more than $150,000.

Hawaiians sway for community

GETTING WITH THE SWING—Peco Courtney and Gene Sampson took a good look at the rhythm before they tried to master the hula after being invited to join in during a hula demonstration at the Community Center.

Hawaiian music floating throughout the Warm Springs Community Center, one could almost imagine being on the tropical island instead of in the mainland. In a musical program offered by the Hui Lea Nani Singers of Punahou High School, Honolulu, Hawaii on June 16 to the community of Warm Springs the performers presented a taste of Hawaii on song and dance to local people.

The Hui Leo Nani Singers started their 1982 tour at Seattle, Washington on June 9. They traveled to the Yakima Reservation and then to the Colville Reservation. The tour gave the group a chance to share a part of the island culture with the mainland. They presented songs and dances of the island culture. The group consists of high school students chosen for their talents as well as their academic achievements. After leaving Warm Springs they continued on to Portland, Oregon; Ojai and Los Angeles California, with a final stop at Disneyland.

Under the direction of Robert E. Peters the group has made the tour to present a taste of Hawaiian culture to the mainland. This year marks the last year for Peters as their Director.

Entertaining with music and dances treated the spectators for most of the evening. During the dance program dancers invited the crowd to express themselves by joining in a hula. The program ended with the song Aloha Oe (Until We Meet Again) as they walked into the crowd giving leis of shells, a kiss and a Aloha to all.

Following the program the public was invited to share refreshments and friendship with the Hui Lea Nani Singers.
