

Rain, crowds and Governor drop in on Pi-Ume-Sha

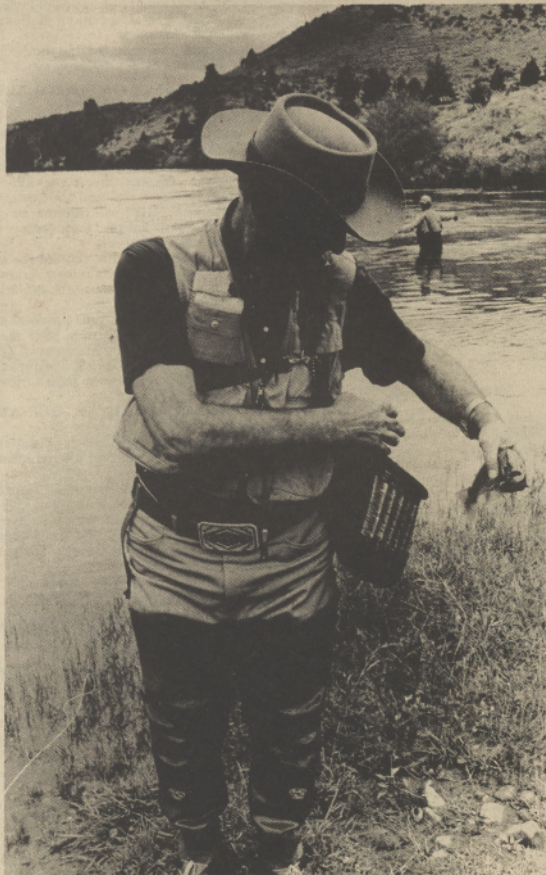

Fish and Game officer Cliff Jenkin was assigned as Governor Atiyeh's body guard throughout his visit to Warm Springs. Jenkin appeared to take his job very seriously.

Governor Atiyeh set up shop in a tepee for people to talk with him about issues concerning Indians.

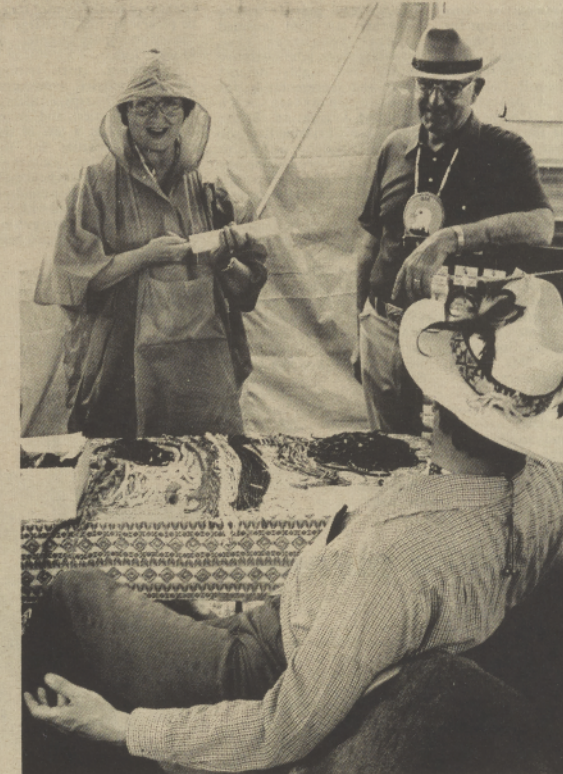

The Atiyehs apparently enjoyed the fry bread that they purchased at the Pi-Ume-Sha grounds.

A trip to Whiskey Dick's gave the Governor the opportunity to do a bit of fly fishing—and even catch a few rainbow trout.

For the first time in years, Pi-Ume-Sha was deluged with heavy rain. Umbrellas popped up as the rain came down—usually umbrellas are used to keep off the sun.

While at the Pi-Ume-Sha grounds, the Governor and Mrs. Atiyeh made the rounds at the trader's tables.

Spilyay Tymoo photos by Donna Behrend
and
Marsha Shewczyk