

Products found unsafe

The following products have been recalled by the U.S. Consumer Safety Commission because they have been found unsafe and dangerous, according to IHS sanitarian Jerry Shipps.

1. "Hydro Air" Suction Drain Cover for Hot Tubs and Spas. Two drownings have occurred in Oregon when pre-teenage girls put their heads under water and their hair became trapped in the drain cover. The problem cover has three slots on its face. Anyone known to have this type of drain cover should call Hydro Air Industries (collect) at 714-974-1920.

2. "Protecto Hold Me Tite" Squeeze Toy. This is a built-in speaker. It was involved in two recent accidents when the handle lodged in the throats of infants, causing suffocation. Three models are involved: a pink elephant, a yellow bear and an orange lion. On the back of the head is stamped "Reliance Products Corporation, made in Taiwan." These toys must be returned to stores for full refund.

FERC issues order on Pelton rent

It was announced recently by Tribal attorney Dennis Karnopp that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), issued an "opinion and order" concerning the rental rate paid to the tribes by Portland General Electric (PGE) for Pelton Dam.

According to Karnopp, the FERC order stated the rental rate would increase from the present rate of $94,000 per year to $650,000 per year—nearly seven times greater than the present rate. The new rate would be retroactive to January 13, 1978. The increase is based on the Consumer Price Index (CPI), and as the inflation rate fluctuates, so does the CPI.

The parties involved (PGE and the Tribes) in the rent negotiations may ask for rehearing on the rate increase if they are dissatisfied. The petition for rehearing must be filed within 30 days of the FERC order, or by October 1, 1982. If rehearing is denied, the decision can be appealed to either the U.S. Circuit Court for the District of Columbia or the Court of Appeals for the 9th District in Washington, D.C.
