Talent show draws central Oregonians

Talent in Warm Springs is nothing to scoff at, especially when the Warm Springs elementary fourth grade students walked away with a $100 prize at the 1983 talent show.

The students performing a tumbling act making geometric designs; with their bodies competed against ten other acts. The entertainers came from Bend, Redmond and Warm Springs.

The acts included: yodeling by Jack Smith of Bend; baton twirling, dance and gymnastics by Bonnie Sullens of Redmond; a religious song by a youth singing group from Redmond; drumming and singing chipmunk style by the Jim, Suppah and Johnson families.

Other acts were a drama skit by the Redmond United Methodist Youth Group, a baton and dance routine by Trish Reynolds of Redmond; a song by David Sanchez of Redmond; Othello performed by the Warm Springs elementary staff; a solo piano piece by Louie Ike; and a song by the Monk-o-phonics of Redmond.

Although the talent show brought many community members to the Community Center as both participants and viewers, not much money was brought in for the Warm Springs youth soccer league. Any donations for that cause will gladly be accepted according to program coordinator Caroline Cruz.

School seeks logo

School spirit is bound to soar as students, community members and Warm Springs elementary staff sit down at their tables searching their artistic minds for a logo representative of Warm Springs elementary school.

The logo is destined for a t-shirt to be available to community members. The idea behind it is to promote school spirit.

The person creating the winning logo will receive a free T-shirt along with recognition for his or her work.

The logo can incorporate words, a mascot or "whatever would be appropriate" according to Warm Springs elementary counselor Ed Roley. "The idea is to have community involvement."

Students display science projects

Warm Springs students made a good showing at this year's Madras Jr. High science fair with 20 participants, up six from last year. The total number of participants at the fair was 133.

"Not only were the projects more numerous," says counselor Doyle Whipple, "but they were better quality" over last year. "There was pretty much variety in the projects," Whipple added.

The science fair was open to the public the evening of March 15. Sixth grade students from Buff, Metolius, and Warm Springs elementary visited the Jr. High to view the projects as a preview of what they might be doing next year. A video tape was made also to show to those students in preparation for the 1984 science fair.

Four Indians students were given silver awards for their science projects. They were: Jason Anstett, seventh grade; Carla Tewee, seventh; Mary Calica, eighth; and, Edith Dominguez, eighth.

Other participating students included: Annette Archer, Corey Clements, Missy David, James Greeley, George Ike, Willis Miller, Tody Stacona, Gina Sixkiller, Phoebe Suppah, Leanna Trimble, Darlene Trimble, Virgil Windy Boy, Monica Wahnetah, Everette Windy Boy, Norman Wolf and Lauren Youngdeer.
