"Spilyay Speaks"

A pre-caution for those who go out to cut fire wood here on the reservation either for themselves or for sale. There have been woodcutters going onto private property to cut wood, which is trespassing. There are several charges that can be brought against these violators.

One of the biggest concerns is the respect for personal property. People don't seem to have any respect for peoples property around here. They go in and cut trees down and even across peoples fences, and when they are done cutting the log they just leave the damaged fence without realizing the cost to maintain and repair fences.

According to the law and order code we have a civil law and a criminal law that deals with trespass depending on how one would like to treat the incident. Definition of trespass in the law and order code No. 305.340. Trespass. Any Indian who enters or remains unlawfully in or upon the property of another or upon tribal land declared closed by the Tribal Council shall be deemed guilty of trespass and can be subject to a jail sentence or a fine or both. We have the civil that can be applied against non-Indians and those non-enrolled Indians married into the tribe. Charges can be filed against a person for:

(1) 305.220 Injury to Public Property. Any Indian who shall, without proper authority, use or willfully injure any public property of the Tribes or the United States Government shall be deemed guilty of injury to public property.

(2) 305.225 Malicious Mischief. Any Indian who shall intentionally recklessly disturb, injure or destroy any livestock or other domestic animal or other property belonging to another shall be deemed guilty of malicious mischief

(3) 305.230 Receiving Stolen Property. Any Indian who shall receive or conceal or aid in concealing or receiving any property, knowing the same to be embezzled, or obtained by theft, shall be deemed guilty of receiving stolen property.

In the first place when a person goes into the forestry department for a permit to cut wood, they designate specific area's where one can cut wood. They have a map that shows nine different areas where one can cut wood. One in the Mutton Mountain area, a couple on the northend of the reservation and areas from Schoolie on south to the Metolius Bench and around Camp Creek.

So think before you cut down that tree, can't tell there might be someone who fires only one shot for warning. YIKES, well be sure you are not on private property and stay within the designated areas for fire wood.

Why Change???

To the Editor,

I heard and read that Kah-Nee-Ta is changing. Well, I want to know why. I know for sure now we have to change ads and bill-boards. Kah-Nee-Ta literature and brochures will be changed. Things like menus and cards we put in rooms. I wanted to say it's foolish. We will have to spend lots and lots of money to change all of these things. And probably send out for a advertisement agency, too.

Sincerely,
Lois A. Selam

Pointers for parents

If more parents asked as much about safety precautions in high school sports as they do about their child's first date, thousands of injuries a year could be prevented, a national expert on injury prevention said.

"Of the five million boys and girls in interscholastic sports, about 800,000 will be injured this year," said Dr. Robert Barton, president of the National Athletic Trainers' Association. "Parents should ask who is responsible for treating those injuries. They should inquire at the school about his or her qualifications. But they usually don't."

Barton said prep students sustain the same type of injuries as college and pro athletes, but the quality of care is much less in nine of every ten high schools. In fact, he said, many injuries in prep sports are really re-injuries, cases where an individual was not taken care of properly in the first place.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare conducted a national study of high school sports injuries.

At that time, the person primarily responsible for athletic health care was most often a coach or assistant coach, ranging from 77 percent in public secondary schools 32 percent of the four-year colleges. The report noted that, "Unfortunately, the attention of coaches generally focuses on the practice or competition rather than health care problems."

But even today a nationally certified health professional for prep athletes is still considered a luxury in most high schools, according to Barton, head athletic trainer at Eastern Kentucky University. Only five percent of 24,000 U.S. high schools have NATA certified athletic trainers, he said.

More sophisticated high school programs today have at least one teacher with NATA certification. These "teachers-trainers" work in the classroom for two or three periods and serve as full-time athletic trainers, caring for an average of 400 student-athletes.

Management workshop

consequence of said treaty, the same shall be valued, under the direction of the President of the United States, and payment made thereof; or, in lieu of said payment, improvements of equal extent and value at their option shall be made for them on the tracts assigned to each respectively.

The above was Article I of the treaty of 1855, for clarity and better understanding for those who have misconceptions of the treaty.

The workshop was a day long affair including the Wheeler-Howard Act, which was another big turnabout for the Indians as this led toward self-determination for the Indians. An act to Conserve and Develop Indian lands and resources: To extend to Indians the right to form business and other organizations; to establish a Credit System for Indians to grant certain rights of home rule to Indians: to provide for vocational education for Indians; and for other purposes.

Ken Smith, of Ken Smith and Associates, who works as a consultant to the Tribes, spoke on the Constitution and by-laws of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs. Larry Calica, Acting Secretary/Treasurer gave a rundown on the Management Project needs. A communication plan needs to be updated, the reward, recognition, incentive plan; the evaluation; Management; salary administration; job group reviews; job classification; performance standards; civic involvement; capitalized program plan; economic development; and the personnel policy manual modification. Calica mentioned that its been several years since the policy manual has been updated. A worth while workshop that was very educational to the managers of the organization.
