Board approves nude sunbathing at Resort

The Kah-Nee-Ta Board of Directors voted at their most recent meeting to incorporate nude sunbathing at the resort. The "See 'Em As They Are" beach will be located at the edge of the resort's sewage lagoons. "The lagoons are useless the way they are," stated Kah-Nee-Ta Board of Directors chairman Mike Clements. "What better, more profitable way to use the area than this."

Construction on the new(d) beaches began last week with truck loads of white Maui, Hawaii sand being hauled in and dumped near the lagoons. "This sand, which cost the resort $10,000 per load, is said to be the best in the world," said Clements. Approximately 7,500 loads of the white stuff will be used.

Because of the anticipated popularity of the beaches, a sun bathing schedule has been arranged. Those people who can prove, with legal documents, that their first names begin with A, C, F, H, K, M, N, Q, R, S, V, X and Z will be allowed to bath (no soap, please) on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Those people who claim their middle names begin with B, D, E, G, I, J, L, O, P, T, U and Y will be allowed to bath (with soap, only) on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays. Times for bathing will be 6:30 p.m. to 8:15 for everyone. No one weighing over 100 pounds will be allowed to use the beaches. "It would be much too embarrassing for us all," said Clements, who weighs in at 92 pounds.

Those people with first, middle or last names beginning or ending with the letter W will not be allowed to use the beaches at all. "There's no reasonable explanation for this, the board just decided it should be that way," said Clements.

A fee of $50 per 1/2 hour will be charged. "We estimate that with this charge, we should be in the 'black' of things (or at least tanned of things) by January," said Clements.

Other business discussed at the meeting included gambling (from slots to dice), selling the resort to Baghwan Shreek Rajneesh, banning the use of cars and bicycles on the resort property, cutting the manager's salary to $3.35 per hour and closing the resort during the summer months. Though these items were discussed at length, and in some cases even voted upon, results were not available at press time.

Tribe to raise wages, give food!!

Tribal employees learned last week, that after eight years, they will be receiving substantial raises, effective April 31, 1988. Following years of near-poverty living standards most employees were more than elated upon hearing the news.

Council and management have operated on the theory that "more money doesn't always mean better employees." Fiscal branch manager and controller of the purse strings Tight Mac explained the forthcoming raises. "Those employees who have been with us since January 1, 1988 will receive double what they're getting now. Employees hired between January 1, 1982 and January 1, 1988, will receive half again as much as they receive now. All employees who were hired prior to January 1, 1982 will receive two cans of salmon, 50 pounds of flour, a year's supply of shaving cream and two gallons of A & W Root-beer. At least the old timers will have lukameen in every pot, something to drink and be clean shaven."

Claiming to "have their hearts in the right places," some members of the management team question the legality and propriety of this recent decision. "The salmon was originally caught for ceremonial purposes...Can we really give it away? Plus, the shaving cream is costing us a bundle. We should forego the cream and give something useful, such as ice cream, so the people can have rootbeer floats. We don't really care if our male employees are bearded or that the women have unshaven legs," said Squeaky Clean.

Some employees, who have been with the tribal organization since before 1982, have filed a grievance with the federal magistrate in Portland. "We feel that the Tribe should have given us a monetary award. But no, they saw fit to reward the newcomers. It's a very frustrating situation that can only be resolved in federal court. They could have at least given us three cans of salmon," said salmon advisor and watermaster Dee Pack Sea Gull, an employee since 1952.

In response to the federal suit, Mac said the Tribe intends to employ a member of the Russian bar association to represent them. "They deal with this type of thing all the time and are very familiar with unruly employees. Over there, dissidents are sent to Siberia. We're currently preparing a camp on the edge of Dry Hollow that is very similar to Siberia. We have done this with the approval of our Russian advisors."

While the raise schedule has caused some irregular work habits and schedules, nearly all employees have continued to report to work as usual. Additional information will be presented in the next issue of Spill Away News.

Dee Pack Sea Gull was overcome with anxiety after hearing that he was finally going to receive a raise. He is heading the employee group filing against the Tribe.

Organizational Meeting for Draft Dodgers Anonymous Call: DODGERS for information

New sick detection system to be installed April 13

Installation of a computerized video phone system will begin next week at the administration building following close scrutiny of employee "faking and cheating" their sick leave calls. The existing switchboard will be removed and replaced with a super-size viewing screen and a mini-computer.

Cameras have been hidden throughout the reservation so that whenever an employee calls in "sick," his picture will appear on the large screen TV. The video image will also be teletyped to local stores and other establishments, so that owners can report to the tribe whenever a "sick" person visits their establishment.

Management hopes that this move will "drastically cut absenteeism," said C.U. Soon. "It'll be fun to watch those 'sickies' squirm and to see what excuse they'll come up with," he said.

Also installed are special long-range cameras aimed toward Madras, so that employees living south of the reservation aren't completely off the hook. However, those cameras are not expected to be as effective as those installed on the reservation.

Employees are screaming, justly so, that the new system is an invasion of privacy. "I'm intending to file suit," said Lazy Zee Boy. "I think it's unfair that management expects us to really be sick all the time."

Management says there is no invasion of privacy. "They're calling us, we're not calling them," said Soon. Not only does the new system track employees' truthfulness, but it is also a giant entertainment and cleaning center. Those employees who come in early will be allowed to play video games, make coffee, bake bread, iron, vacuum and perform other household chores while away from home. The program's features allow users to simply push a single button and their homes are instantly cleaned. Those employees with extra-dirty homes will be charged a small fee for the services.

First man becomes pregnant, digs in What previously has been thought to be physically impossible has occurred. The first man, yes man, in the world is pregnant and due to deliver his first born later this year. The young man, J.J. What A Burden just recently discovered that he is in fact pregnant. What A Burden is a member of the near-extinct Bay' Bee tribe.

"This no laughing matter," said the 25-year-old expectant father.

"I'm having morning sickness, I feel bloated and fat all the time I can now sympathize with all the women in the world who have had children."

What A Burden married Susan I Fooled You last fall. "We have always wanted a family...but we're not too crazy about it happening this way," said the 87-year-old Susan. "I wanted to have the baby and I'm mad as ... that he gets to be pregnant and I don't."

The What A Burdens have already gained worldwide notoriety and have received many complimentary gifts from corporations from throughout the country. So far, they have received a two year supply of diapers, a case of prophalactics and a three year supply of birth control pills.

The couple is making their home, literally, at the foot of Mt. Jefferson. The secluded spot was chosen so that the father-to-be would not be disturbed by reporters and so the mother would not be hounded by men wishing to become fathers.

Tribe wins big in lottery, plans re-entry

The Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs received their first of 6,000 monthly dividend checks totaling $300,000 last week after winning Oregon's biggest "Boo Koo Bucks" lottery.

The unusual payoff was the result of "group" purchase of one-million lottery tickets last Wednesday. Every tribal member over 18 years of age, was given $5 to purchase five quick-pick with the understanding that if their numbers were chosen, the winnings would be deposited in the general fund. The monies will be used for capital projects, such as a large bingo parlor, gambling casinos and brothels.

Management and Tribal Council have yet to agree on just how to spend the first monthly dividend check. Rumor has it that Council has selected a committee that will take the winnings to either Reno or Las Vegas for gambling purposes. "We intend to get the most for our money," said on tribal official.

As for using the funds for other purposes, such as helping the needy, investments, health and welfare programs and the like, the tribal government is reluctant to "invest in people. People are an unpredictable bunch. You never know what they want or need." This way, the source said, we'll "know where our money is or isn't. It's a nothing-ventured, nothing-gained philosophy."

With dollar signs in their eyes, management is planning a similar scheme whenever the Boo Koo pot reaches the $80 million limit.

Editor tells of upcoming wedding

Spill Away editor Sid Knee Miller has announced his impending betrothal to...what's her name. Their marriage is set for February 30, 2000. All reservation residents are invited to attend. The wedding will be at the Ashram building behind the Administration Building beginning at 6 a.m.

Natives exume whites

A strange happening occurred at the Madras cemetery. It seems a group of Indians attending the University of California received a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation to do a study on early white settlers in the Central Oregon area. The group of Indian anthropologists selected the Madras site since they had heard the Madras area had a strong Pioneer association.

Heading the dig is Sam Little Shovel who is well known for his white pioneer digs.

The group will gather artifacts from graves and label them for an in-depth study. They will publish all their findings in the National American Indians Dig Dug, the Native American anthropologist paper.

So if you are driving past the cemetery and see some Indians digging up graves, have no worries, they are only doing their jobs.

River directly above and parallel to the bridge. "It will be similar to the Howard Johnsons seen in the mid-west," said contracting supervisor Moe Teller.

The owners have expressed the desire to build an elegant but inexpensive establishment. Room rates are expected to be comparable to other flop joints in the area. Rooms on the first floor will feature water beds filled with unheated water from the Deschutes. "It'll be tough to get the water into those beds," said Teller. His plan is to have the water run from bed to bed, so that there will be no waste of the resource. The upper floors will be sound-proof, unlike the first floor, and feature such amenities as bare floors, hourly rates and cold tap water.

Teller anticipates to be finished with construction of the motel by April 31. Construction began January 31.

Over the Deschutes... No-tell motel to be constructed Owners of the Deschutes Crossing and Rainbow Market have reached an agreement that will drastically change dining and motel offerings in Warm Springs.

The owners, who wished to remain anonymous at this time will soon begin construction of a 500-room motel that will span the Deschutes

Woman seeking pen pal

I am looking for an American Indian who would like to share a friendship. I have always felt that the American Indians suffered when their land was taken away. I am a 45-year-old old female who has been divorced six times. I have 15 children, all on welfare. I live in HUD housing and I, myself, am on welfare and food stamps. If there is an Indian male between the ages of 45-65 who would like to write to me I would appreciate it very much. I would love to come visit your reservation and stay in one of your teepees. I am told by my mother that my great-great grandmother was a full-blooded Indian princess and I am 1/3 Indian. I am told my Indian blood is Cherokee but I haven't been able to trace my background since my great-great grandmother was kidnapped by a band of outlaws who took her from her people. I do have a string of beads that she was wearing at the time of her capture and that is the only part of her heritage I have. Please write and I will answer all letters.

Money run input needed

I am looking for some assistance in safeguarding the money runs made from the reservation to the Madras banks. If there is anyone who can give me some wild ideas about how they would "hit" the runs, I would be interested. I am doing a research paper to show that the transfer of monies from the reservation could be improved. I promise to keep all information confidential. Send your ideas to: Ivan Strong Box #773865, State Street, Salem, Oregon 97301. I thank you in advance for your most profitable ideas.

Thank you,
