Sports camp offers fitness, nutrition workshops

The Gary Bays' Sports Camp, formerly known as the WPC Hoop Camp, will hold its tenth camp session at George Fox College in Newberg, Oregon. The camp will feature sessions for boys and girls in basketball and girls volleyball. Sessions will begin July 17.

Six-day camps with lodging will cost $210 per individual. A non-refundable deposit of $50 per session is required from each applicant. Remainder of fee must be paid on arrival at camp.

The camp is headed up by Gary Bays, with a 20 year coaching background that spans every level from junior high school through college.

He has 15 years experience in the summer camp business. He is credited with building winning programs from scratch. Bays just completed a 12 year career at Warner Pacific where his last six teams and eight of his last ten clubs qualified for the district play-offs. Bays' camp began with 43 boys and girls in a one week camp and grew to 550 boys and girls in the summer of 1987. Due to the rapid growth the camp site has been moved to George Fox College where there is more dorm space, a larger cafeteria and plenty of gym space.

The girls' volleyball camp is new this year, it was added due to the many requests Bays receive for just such a camp. The volleyball session will be held August 14-19.

Fitness and nutrition workshops will be offered during the each session. A full battery of fitness testing will be conducted. The added features make this camp the fore-runner among sports camps. Also featured will be the International Tour Program, all-star boys and girls will be selected from the camps to travel abroad to play against international competition. The June 1988 tour will spend three weeks in the Far East with a combines boys/-girls team. Another squad to travel in June of 1989 will also be selected from boys and girls at the camp for 1988. If you are 16 years old or older come to camp to try out for the tour team.

Four sessions offered are session one: boys basketball camp from July 17-22; session two: girls basketball camp from July 31-August 5; session three: boys basketball from August 7-12; and session four: girls basketball from August 14-19 and girls volleyball from August 14-19.

For an application or more information write to Gary Bays Sports Camp, 8910 S.E. Spencer Drive, Portland, Oregon 97266 or telephone (503) 659-5563.

Basketball camp set for 1988 season

If you are looking for a girls basketball camp that will give you a total basketball experience for junior high and senior high basketball players, look no further. Sign up for the 1988 Dave Cox's Basketball Camp at Seattle University in Seattle, Washington.

Two-week sessions will be held with the first session from July 17-22 and the second session July 24-

29. The open session will offer intensive fundamentals, individual and team man-to-man defensive fundamentals, general offensive fundamentals for individual and team, position play, league games and individual tournament competition, personal improvement and motivational talks by coaches and guest speakers. Camp sessions cost resident $200 and non-housing $180.

Each girl is guaranteed a week of intensive basketball while learning individual skills and basis team concepts. Girls will be on the court each day from 8:30 a.m. until 9 p.m. followed by inspirational and motivational talks each evening at 10 p.m. These are the same concepts and philosophies that the winning Seattle University women's basketball team receive.

Not only will top coaches be involved in the camps but the girls will have a chance to play with and learn from current top college players.

A team advance week from July 31 through August 5 will feature individual school teams to compete as a unit; individuals can be assigned to a team; college players compete on teams to enhance skill level; more advanced offensive and defensive skills; individual tournaments; super star competitions; all-star competitions and motivational talks by coaches and guest speakers.

Junior rodeo set for May 28, 29

Pee-wee rodeo season starts

The first rodeo of the Central Oregon Pee Wee Rodeo club was held March 26 at the Jefferson County Fairgrounds at the indoor arena. According to sponsors it drew cowboys and cowgirls from three to 14 years of age to compete in barrel racing, pole bending, goat tying, breakaway roping, calf and pony bucking.

The schedule for the summer rodeo show for the organization are as follows: April 23, Prineville indoor arena; Prineville, May 1, Madras, June 5, Redmond; July 23-24, Crook River Ranch arena, Terrebonne; August 21, Redmond and September 10-11, the finals at Crooked River Ranch arena.

The Pee Wee Rodeo rules allow boys and girls to compete against each other in their classes for year-end awards. Points are compiled and at the end of the season, a saddle is given to the all-around cowboy or cowgirl in junior, intermediate and senior divisions. The kids also win trophies and individual event buckles.

In the peewee rodeo, horses are required to meet certain criteria. In the underage, junior and intermediate divisions the horses must be 54 inches and under. A younger age contestant may be required to enter the senior class if their horse is taller than the 54 inch requirement. Senior participants can ride horses of any size.

Non-members are welcome to compete and there is no admission charge for spectators. Rodeos start at 11 p.m. For more information and to enter call Laurel Johnson at 548-5539.
