During the coldest night of the year, as the temperatures dipped well below zero, this little colt was born. She weathered the storm in good shape. A week and a half later, the colt was nibbling hay with her mother.

MOIHS receives $300,000 grant from Fred Meyer

The Warm Springs tribal museum came another step closer to reality last week with the award of a major grant from the Fred Meyer Charitable Trust. The approval of the grant of $300,000 was made by the Board of Trustees on February 3, 1989 and will be used for construction, exhibits, educational programming and outreach for the new tribal museum.

This brings to $3.3 million, the total funds committed for the project. The goal of the capital campaign, which began three and a half months ago, is $4.5 million. "We still have over a million dollars to raise, and a lot of work to do," according to Dr. Duane King, Executive Director of the Middle Oregon Indian Historical Society. Funds are being sought from federal, state, tribal and private funding agencies.

"The grant from the Fred Meyer Trust is the first from a private agency and we are very happy with their confidence in this project," said Zane Jackson, Tribal Council Chairman. Charles Rooks, Executive Director of the Trust, responded, "We are happy to be able to strongly support this very worthwhile project."

The museum will be built adjacent to Highway 26 near the population center of the Warm Springs reservation. Groundbreaking is scheduled for late 1989 with the completion by the summer of 1990.

Smith notes challenges of future

In a memo to all employees recently, newly appointed chief executive officer and Secretary/Treasurer Ken Smith explained that "much has been done over the past several years to plan for the future...I am very excited about the prospects for the future. I believe the challenges of the next decade are very important to posture our community and our reservation for the next century. There are a lot of opportunities in front of us, and I believe we can take advantage of them."

Among those challenges are individuals assuming responsibility for themselves, improved health, improved education and economic development and employment diversification.

In addition to noting the challenges, Smith also announced temporary assignments that will continue through the transition period.

Designated check signers, in addition to Smith, will be Evaline Patt and Larry Calica.

Larry Calica will certify Tribal Council resolutions in Smith's absence.

Calica will also execute federal grants and contracts on Smith's behalf.

Charles "Jody" Calica will be responsible for coordinating all management meetings and schedules and the Tribal Council agenda. Any meetings with Smith will be coordinated by Charles Calica.

Until new managers are in place, hiring authority will remain with Doug McClelland, Ed Manion and John Henning for their respective areas. Hiring of any key technical and supervisory positions will be considered temporary and subject to the reorganization.

Ed Manion is delegated full authority for the allocation of building space for the organization. He will designate the location for all work units. All line-managers and direct service operations should be closer to their respective operation and more accessible to the public. Therefore, it is planned to move all line-managers out of the administration building and set up their offices in the appropriate departments.

Larry Calica will approve special budget requests or other budget matters. These should be submitted through the finance department, just as in the past.

Rudy Clements will develop a plan for regular communications with the community about organizational developments, plans and operations.

Mike Clements will continue to coordinate federal legislative matters with the Oregon Tribes and maintain on-going dialogue with the tribal lobbyist.

Drugs, alcohol adversely affect unborn children

Increasing information and concern is developing over the use of all types of drugs as well as alcohol during pregnancy.

Pregnancy is an extremely important and vulnerable time for a baby. During this time the baby is growing very rapidly and developing all of its organs such as eyes, heart, brains, arms, legs, fingers, kidneys, etc. Anything that interferes with this growth and development can result in permanent problems or changes in the baby.

Some recent research has indicated that mothers who use drugs as well as alcohol can hurt their baby as well as put the pregnancy at increased risk. These risks include spontaneous abortions, premature labor and identified most recently, is that babies exposed to cocaine during pregnancy can have direct brain damage. Also exposure during pregnancy to cocaine may increase a child's chance for SID (Sudden Infant Death) by as much as 40 times.

The full story is not in on all the effects drugs and alcohol may have on babies and pregnancy. However, the best and safest approach is to give each pregnancy and your new baby a drug and alcohol free pregnancy.
