

Program provides sense of belonging

MHS students plan to attend college

Warm Springs Elementary fourth grade student, Jason Tohet, strings bow during self-manager activity. Physical education instructor Dave Jordan observes.

The majority of students at Warm Springs elementary are "not academic leaders and do not have behavior problems," says Self-manager Program coordinator Dawn Smith. Because they are not a part of either category, they generally receive little recognition. The Self-manager Program provides a sense of belonging and it also provides the opportunity for all students to be recognized.

Students at Warm Springs Elementary in grades 2-5 are eligible to become self-managers. They must first, however, fill out an application and have it signed by parents, teacher and support staff. The applicant is awarded a self-manager patch if the students can explain what being a self-manager entails.

A self-manager must do what he or she is supposed to do without being told. The self-manager follows rules, works towards the school goals, gets assignments in, listens to the school staff and teachers and is told to do things only once. Students will have to forfeit their patch if they do not live by the rules.

Students who hold a self-manager patch are given special privileges by teachers and two times each month activities are planned in which these students may participate.

Approximately 125 students are participating in the program at one time. Smith says, "We have wonderful kids who have been self-managers from the beginning of the year. They deserve recognition."

These students have been awarded self-manager badges:

Lynn Tanewasha

Marcie Stacona

by Saphronia Coochise

Marcelene Stacona is 17 years old and is of the Warm Springs, Wasco and Yurok tribes. She is the daughter of Marcelene LeClaire. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. William Gensaw of Klamath, California. She has three sisters, which include: Cheryl, Debbie and Charlene and three brothers: Mark, Louie and Ronnie.

Activities that Stacona is involved in is being a chairperson for the Native American Student Union. She has also attended the American Indian Upward Bound Program the past three years. She enjoys meeting people and traveling. She has participated in her favorite sport softball her freshman through junior years.

Business Law is a favorite class of Marcie's. Her outlook of the past school years is "I've had fun my freshman through junior years." Her feelings about this being her last year in school is "I am glad that I am preparing myself for college and will soon be getting the chance to be on my own." Friends are what she will miss the most about high school.

Marcie stated that Business Management or Law (Pre-Law) will be her career choice and Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah is her college choice.

Her comments to the remaining are: to finish school and prepare your own selves for college and have fun your remaining school years.

Lynn Tanewasha is 17 years old and is of the Warm Springs, Wasco and Yakima descent. She is the daughter of Ramona Tanewasha. Marcie Miller and Lavina Queampts are her grandmothers, both of Warm Springs. Lynn has one brother, 13 year old Marty, an eighth grader at MJHS and one sister, Sandra Main, age 22 and a 1984 graduate of MHS.

She has participated in softball and basketball throughout high school. She is at this time a pitcher on the varsity softball team. Softball has always been her favorite sport. Her favorite teacher is Rod Chester but she does not find any particular class a favorite. Special awards Tanewasha has received are second team all state and Most Valuable Player in softball.

Her outlook of the past school years as she stated, "I wish I could have taken school more seriously, like with grades and not just tried to have fun all the time."
