Teens get "provisional" driver's license

Automobile crashes are the num- For purposes of the Implied Conber one killer of our children. Sometimes alcohol or drugs are involved. Sometimes it's reckless driving or just inexperience. In 1989, the Oregon Legislature passed the new Provisional Licensing Law to help keep our kids alive.

Beginning October 3, 1989, teens under 18 who apply for a driver license will get a new kind of license. It's "provisional." It's a test. If they pass, it becomes a regular license when they are 18. If a child is a safe driver, neither you nor your child will notice the difference.

Part of the new law applies to all teens under 18, including those who already have their licenses:

sent Law, no alcohol is allowed. Both teens who already have licenses and who receive new provisional licenses will automatically lose their license for at least 90 days if a breath test shows a Blood Alcohol Content (BAC) of more than .00. Persons over 18 lose their license for at least 90 days at .08 or more BAC. Anyone refusing to take the breath test will lose their license for at least a year.

Here are some other important facts about the new provisional Licensing Law: It adds a safedriving practices test to the standard driving test. It speeds up the penalty and driver improvement process for those receiving a provisional license: Minor violations-After one minor violation (such as impropoer lane use), drivers will receive a warning letter; After two minor violations, they wil be required to meet with a driver improvement counselor to discuss ways to keep their license; After three minor violations, they will lose their license until completion of a driver improvement program; After four minor violations, they will lose their license until they are at least 18. Major violations-For one major violation, such as DUII; (Driving Under the Influence of Intoxicants) or reckless driving, drivers will lose their license until they are at least 18, in addition to any other penalties.

The legal drinking age remains

Teenagers between 13 and 18 years old who are convicted of possessing or using alcohol or drugs are still not allowed to drive, or even take a test for a driver license or permit, for one year or until they are 17, whichever is longer.

As a parent, you can still write a letter to the Department of Motor Vehicles withdrawing your approval of your child's license for irresponsible or unsafe driving. You may also put restrictions on your child's driving privileges, such as not driving at night without a licensed adult present.

The new law emphasizes to teens that driving is a privilege and a responsibility. It will help make Oregon's roads safer for all of us, and should eventually help control teenage insurance rates.

what kind of window is in their room or house. Then they are ing to the type of window they have.

In groups of two, the children are asked to lie on the bed and a smoke detector alarm goes off. The children are instructed to roll on the floor because by now the room is filled with simulated smoke. They are told to crawl to the closed door to feel if it is warm or hot to the touch. Next, open the door and crawl down a small hallway to another door. This door is warm and smoke pours out from behind it. The children are then instructed to go back to the room and open the window and climb out. Usually into the arms of a fireman or an adult.
