

Subbasin planning— Cultural impacts should be considered

An estimated 150 people listened to 25 representatives of regional agencies and organizations, tribes, utilities and Bonneville customers as they met for the second Salmon and Steelhead Round Table in October. The meeting, sponsored by the Northwest Power Planning Council, was designed to review efforts under the Columbia River Basin Fish and Wildlife Program and to provoke ideas for the future.

In the wrap-up of the session, Council Chairman Tom Trulove reported, "Generally, we heard that salmon and steelhead declines over the last several decades have been halted." But he noted several cautions about this conclusion, such as a small decline in runs over the past year and the fact that many natural stocks have been replaced by hatchery production.

Round table participants said fish runs that need the most attention now are those in the Snake River Basin. They also pointed to many positive program accomplishments such as habitat projects, hatcheries, improved passage in the Yakima Basin and better research.

Past and future costs of the fish program were a major focus of the discussions. Participants urged policy-level discussions prior to developing budgets and utilities said no area of the budget should be immune from consideration for reductions. Representatives of agencies and tribes urged that deeply felt cultural impacts and years of inaction should be considered along with economic factors when making rehabilitation decisions.

Discussion also centered on streamlining the processes for implementing fish measures and on whether a consensus was necessary prior to all decisions.

More legends will be developed into curriculum and the Culture and Heritage Department hopes to see an Indian Arts curriculum introduced into District schools as soon as possible. An Indian language program has recently been approved by the 509-J School Board for kindergarten students at Warm Springs Elementary. A plan is being developed to bring the Indian language to all grades. Adults, too, will benefit from the language and legend collection of the Culture and Heritage Department. Morrison visualizes classes in the language for adults, eventually. At this time materials are available for viewing at the Culture and Heritage Department located at the Community Center.

Stations will air school closures

Cold weather season is upon us. Please be sure you know the procedures when school will be closed.

1. Early morning closure announcements or school delays will be broadcast by radio stations KWSI, KRCC, KPRB and KTVZ-TV. Listen to the radio, please do not call the school or the support services building.

2. It may be necessary to send children home early because of a threat of severe weather or other emergency. Please have a "second home" near your home where your children may stay in case you are away from home, and let your children know what the plan is that you make for these emergencies. Go over this with your children so they will be prepared for any emergency that may arise.

3. Since the cold weather is here be sure that your child remembers to bring a coat to school. Being outside is important, but it is cold enough that a coat is needed. If your child has been sick and you feel a need for them to stay inside please send a note with your child.
