During the Treaty Days Rodeo, several cowboys had some tough luck during the roping events and came up empty to take no time.

Begay takes championship

Anson Begay takes the All-Around championship at the annual Pi-Ume-Sha Treaty Days rodeo. Begay won the steer wrestling with the time of 4.85, and done well in the roping events.

The Pi-Ume-Sha rodeo provided plenty of action from the stock furnished by the Prinz Rodeo Producers of Sisters, Oregon. Ken Grossmiller, a well-noted rodeo announcer handled the chores at the mic. The action was fast and wild. The stock almost out did the cowboys as there were only two qualified bareback rides and one in the saddle bronc. The bulls handled the cowboys 100 percent as no one made a qualified ride...for that matter there was not a ride made as all riders bit the dust.

The barrel racers tuned in some record times as the girls went right at it. All rode well trained barrel racing horses. The weather was ideal rodeo weather and the fans turned out to see the wild action. The dates conflicted with other shows across the country and a lot of rough stock riders were not present. This was a Western States Indian Rodeo Association sanctioned rodeo and all points made here helps each contestant toward the National Finals in Albuquerque, New Mexico in November. The roping stock were from Sidwalter Flat. The wild horses were from Buck Smith. The Warm Springs Rodeo Association worked hard to get this fine show underway which was quite a success despite the short notice. The following are the results of the rodeo.

It was almost a re-run for third place as a father and son were charging for the finish line when the horse lost its footing and fell with Darol Pampercin, as his father Cliff Pampercin crossed the finish line taking third place and his son getting fourth, and Robert Heath came in fifth. There were 10 entered in the gruelling race in the adult division, others running out of the money were Lillie Suppah, Joe Scott, Delvis Heath, Eydie Switzler, and Shane Olney.

The juniors provided plenty of action as their course was five miles and they came in well ahead of the adults.

The following are the results of the race.

First place—Norman Thomas, 50:49:90. He won a colt, donated by Gordon Scott, Sr., a satin jacket, buckle, beaded rein and breast collar set and $375 (50 percent of the jackpot).

Prevent accidents during baseball

It's baseball season and I will see many of you on the ballfields this summer. I hope that everyone plays fair, has fun and plays safe. Prevent accidents and enjoy your season. If any parents or coaches are interested, the dental clinic has a small handout on what to do in dental emergencies. This may come in handy and we encourage you to pick one up to have on hand just in case.
