900-numbers—Continued from page 7

the FTC offers these suggestions: *Know precisely what the 900 number will cost — before you make the call. Companies should state costs up front as flat rates or if the cost is per minute — the maximum number of minutes for the call. Unfortunately, even with this information, you may still pay to hear sales pitches for bogus products or services.

*Think twice before calling a 900 number for a "free" gift. You may see television ads or receive post-cards or phone calls urging you to call 900 numbers for "free" prizes. Know that you pay for those "free" gifts when you make the 900 number call.

*Don't confuse 900 numbers with toll-free 800 numbers. You pay for the 900 number call. The company pays for the 800 call.

*Talk to your children. Make sure is a largely unregulated industry. Any business can get a 900 number. Make sure any phone charges on your bill for these services are accurate.
