

Reverend Edmond Machamer visited Warm Springs earlier this week and he related many stories of his 24-year appointment, between 1936 and 1960, as Presbyterian minister in Warm Springs. Machamer talked with church members and others, including Cy Katchia, during his brief visit.

Country. "It is not for them (politicians) to determine what those issues are and what needs to be addressed," Zell said.

Indian tribes have become more visible in Washington, D.C. as they have been lobbying for their interests. The visibility, coupled with improved relationships with other Senate committees, have created a window of opportunity for tribal interests, Zell said. Many tribal leaders give much of the credit for the changing climate to Inouye.

Zell said that tribal leaders would have to educate members of Congress and lobby effectively for their interests. Some opposition can be expected, but tribes should not underestimate their own lobbying power and the effect of public opinion in their favor.

Tribal leaders spent the first day of the three-day session discussing the protection of religious freedom and tribes' civil and criminal jurisdiction over non-members living on tribal lands. Indian leaders believe their status as sovereign governments has been eroded in both areas by recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions.

Pierson Mitchell urged leaders to remember the importance of traditional religious teachings. "The only way we can learn about ourselves is if we learn what our forefathers have done, how they worshipped. If we lose our religion, if we lose our language, we are lost. We have nothing."

Reservation residencies down

The 1990 census showed 35 percent of the nations 2 million American Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts are living in areas governed by tribes, that's down from 37 percent in 1980.

The Navajo Nation reservation is the most populous in the nation, with 143,405 American Indians living there, according to the Census Bureau.

The census also showed that 685,464 American Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts live on tribal lands and 1.3 million live off American Indian areas.

Reservations with the largest Indian populations after the Navajo Nation are: Pine Ridge in Nebraska and South Dakota, 11,182; Fort Apache, Arizona, 9,825; Gila River, Arizona, 9,116; Papago, Arizona, 8,480; Rosebud, South Dakota, 8,043; San Carlos, Arizona, 7,110; Zuni Pueblo in Arizona and New Mexico, 7,073; Hopi, Arizona, 7,061; and Blackfoot, Montana, 7,025.

Leaders meet to discuss BIA

More than 60 people, representing 24 Northwest Indian tribes, were in Portland Thursday, July 11, to attend a meeting on the proposed reorganization of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Portland area Task Force Representatives Ken Smith, Chief Executive Officer of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, Georgia George, Chairperson of the Suquamish Tribal Council in Western Washington, and Mickey Pablo, Chairman of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribal Council on the Flathead Reservation in Montana, held the meeting to gather ideas from Northwest tribes.

After opening remarks by Smith, the morning session started with Pablo giving a review of an organization structure proposal and also reviewing Portland area tribal responses to structural questions. George followed with a review of education issues and Portland area tribal responses to education questions. George stated, "Education is a controversial area among task force members from around Indian Country. Northwest tribes need to reach a consensus on the subject so Portland Area task force members can have an impact in setting education directions at the national level."

A theme consistent throughout the one-day session was an appeal for recommendations from all 42 Northwest tribes. In his opening remarks, Smith said "We desperately need your input so we can speak as one voice when we meet with the full 36-member task force in Seattle later in the month."

A view among those in attendance was that now is the time for Northwest tribes to participate in the process, because if they don't, they will have to live with changes made by others.

Smith, when asked about the meeting, said the turnout was good. "There was excellent input provided, some problem areas identified, and a consensus reached on some agenda items. Over all, it was a very positive meeting."

Task force members urged a strong tribal presence at the full task force meeting in Seattle July 23-25. In conjunction with the task force meeting, the Portland Area Tribal Representatives scheduled a meeting on Monday, July 22nd to further discuss issues and gain additional input for Northwest tribal leaders.

The Yakima Nation Indian Housing Authority was among the first Indian housing authorities to receive funding under HUD's public and Indian housing resident management organization grant program. HUD Secretary Jack Kemp announced that ninety-one public housing agencies and four Indian housing authorities across the nation will receive a total of $5 million to help low-income residents manage their housing communities and take the first step toward homeownership.

Submit requests early to NRD

If Tribal Members want to put in a Ceremonial/Donation Salmon Request for planned events with the Department of Natural Resources, please put it in at least three weeks before the event occurs. We have been getting requests a day or two before the event and the request(s) is/are not being approved on time due to the request(s) not being put in advance. Tribal Council needs time to act on the request(s) and there are times where Council is not in the office due to travel and/or other reasons.

Your cooperation will be greatly appreciated.
