Transportation available to Vets

Disabled Veterans of Central Oregon are now being provided a transportation bus which is free of charge. The bus will transport veterans to Bend for doctor's appointments. Veterans need not be a member of Chapter 14, just a disabled Native American Veteran. Those using the bus must have a scheduled appointment at Bend between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Veterans interested in using the transportation whose appointments are not between those hours may call Ann at 382-6735 and she will have your appointment changed. Pick-up points will be in Warm Springs, Madras, Prineville and Redmond.

Geo/Water Quiz

The geo/water quiz is located on the Reservation. Identify the location of this body of water and win a year's subscription to Spilyay Tymoo and a water T-shirt decorated with the Warm Springs Water Negotiations logo. Call 553-1644 with your answer after 1:00 p.m. on Monday, July 29, 1991.

have actively sought work in the past four months, is currently available for work and must not have a job." Under that framework, a discouraged worker would not be counted, he said.

At Pine Ridge, there are 3,000 full-time jobs available for a potential labor force of about 10,000, according to John Tibbitts, Tribal Economic Development Planner for the Oglala Sioux Economic Development Office on the South Dakota reservation.

"If you don't go to the job service and look for work, you're not counted—completely," said Tibbitts. "If you live on a reservation and you went (to the job service) a lot of times and there is no job, you just quit going."

Similar but less dramatic differences are shown in studies of American Indians in Arizona and Minnesota, Tinker says.

American Indians, maintain Bush and Tinker, are culturally different from whites in many respects. The slow-paced reservation lifestyle clashes with the urban lifestyle; the traditional culture makes it hard for Indians to relate to punctuality and rapidly changing technology; and the tribal ethic teaches cooperation rather than competition—"to outshine others would be a cultural fauxpas." the study said.

Don't shake baby!!

Shaking a baby can cause blindness experts warn. A newly recognized injury to children, shaken Infant Syndrome can cause many injuries including brain damage and death.

Injuries can occur when a child is thrown into the air, burped roughly or when swinging a child by the ankles or jolting while upside down. Please be careful when handling your children, even at play.

Scott has designs

Local artist Jim Scott has designs appropriate for beadwork, painting, quilting and other art work. The designs come in many different sizes and are printed on canvas. They can be used for wall hangings or tapestries as well. Contact Scott at 553-1847 or visit him at his home at 4462 Upper Dry Creek.

and the law requiring unification of small school districts, HB 3565 will give the 1991 legislature a record of far-reaching impact on local schools. Walden supported the education reform act, but opposed the unification bill, which now faces the prospect of referral to the voters under a campaign launched earlier this week by concerned parents opposed to unification.

"It will take a while for everyone to feel the full impact of these laws, but that doesn't mean we shouldn't be ready when they take effect. That's why I've shared the information with local teachers and administrators," Walden said.

"But I also want parents and others who are concerned about our education system to know we have this information available. Anyone who's interested should give me a call with questions on any of the changes or for a copy of the fact sheet."

This bill makes major changes in the curriculum and structure of the public schools, phasing in the changes throughout the decade.

Background: HB 3565 is actually an outgrowth of the various educational programs, (prekindergarten, school improvement and professional development, 21st Century Schools) enacted during the 1987 and 1989 sessions and will provide a framework for us to begin to build a more advanced public educational system. This measure will not actually begin to effect schools until 1996.

Following are some major points (and concerns) of the bill:

- Provides for secondary schools to award Certificates of Initial Mastery (CIMs) at age 16 or the completion of the 10th grade by the 1996-97 school year. Students will then be able to choose either a college prep or vocational curriculum to follow, thus earning their Certificate of Advanced Mastery (CAM). All students will be encouraged to stay in school to complete both their CIM and CAM. It is a misconception that school will end at the 10th grade or age 16. Fulfilling a CAM will be comparable to a regular high school diploma, only stronger.

- To assist in encouraging students to stay in school, the Wage and Hour Commission has been directed to prepare proposed rules that would generally bar from employment those under age 18 without certificates and not in programs earning certificates.

FACTS: Nearly 3 out of 10 students beginning first grade will not graduate high school. Yet these students will make up more than a third of our front line work force. Seventy percent of high school graduates do not go on to college. Currently, we prepare only a fraction of our non-college bound students for work.

- Students who have achieved a Certificate of Initial Mastery will be able to choose any accredited institution for their 11th and 12th grades or may remain at their current school. It will mainly depend on the student's educational focus. In most cases, students will remain in their community and take base classes from their current school, while taking more specialized classes from local community colleges, through tele-communication classes, participation in off-campus training with businesses, or apprenticeships.

- Any student having earned the Certificate of Advanced Mastery or who has attained 19 years of age and who wishes to continue a program, may do so by paying tuition. (This will enable a student to complete both programs if they choose to; a student who wants to go the vocational route and work to save money for college, can later go back and take the college prep course requirements.)
- Several folks have had concerns about the elimination of extra-curricular activities such as athletics, music, and drama, since many smaller communities often center civic functions around their high school events. Again, school does not end at the 10th grade. Students will have the same options to participate in extra-curricular activities as they do now, while they complete their CAM. They may have to juggle their schedules some if they participate in apprenticeship programs or off-campus training.

- Students can transfer to another school or district only by receiving the district's approval, with the tuition paid by the district of residence. This practice is currently in place. (Circumstances for transfer: there will be statewide testing of public school students at grades 3, 5, 8, and 10 and extra assistance for those students not achieving at the appropriate level will be provided. If the student still does not achieve, then the student can apply for a transfer.)
- Lengthens school year to 185 days by 1996 (175 days now), 200 days by the year 2001, and 220 days by 2010.

Listening important Listening is a key to relationship building. Listening is one of the best ways to disarm anger. Listening is a first step in negotiation.

A good listener focuses on the message, doesn't jump to conclusions and gives feedback based on what is heard rather than on what they planned to say anyway.

endless thanks for being allowed to serve this district and community."

School board chairman Jeff Sanders stated the board "appreciates Darrell's dedication and service to the district and his leadership abilities that have helped the district overcome many crises. He has been very responsive to many issues and concerns."

On Riley's selection, Sanders stated that "Phil is very knowledgeable in all areas of running a school district. He meets all the qualifications and requirements needed for the job."

Sanders added that a replacement for Riley will be selected soon. "A new assistant superintendent should be in place at the beginning of the school year or shortly thereafter."
