Punning brave..... Dreams can be fulfilled By Sid Miller

Billy Mills was on hand at Barcelona track and field meet to watch the 10,000 meter race. The race he won in Tokyo in the 1964 Olympic games as the only American to ever win the 10,000 meter run. It appeared that he was unaware the TV camera scanning the crowd had him on TV as the race was in progress.

The unnoticed, the person no one ever thought would be near the finish line at the end of the race shocked the whole world when Billy Mills made his move on the final lap of the race and came sprinting down the straight away to win the gold medal. It sounded like the announcer about jumped out of the arena when Mills made his move. The announcer was so excited he literally screamed into the mike with disbelief that Mills made that final move.

As the stories go, Mills grew up on the poverty stricken Sioux Reservation, struggled all his life first making himself known running for the Haskell Indian Junior College in Kansas. Then moving on to Kansas University where he was one of the leading distance runners and finally running for the U.S. Marine Corps when he made the team to go to the Olympics in Japan. Goes to show what determination and hard work can do for an individual, Dreams can be fulfilled if a person sets his mind to it and works, and works hard and putting that dream above anything else. Set a goal and achieve what a person sets to do or be. Mills was no different than any other kid from the reservation. He had his bad times but that didn't stop him from fulfilling his dream. Determination and hard work is the key to anything. There are times when a person has to sacrifice many things to get what he really wants. The difference between many individuals is the glory that is at hand. Today there are many, many Indian athletes who can make something out of themselves if they only could see what Mills visioned when he was growing up. If they would only dream like Mills did and set their goal and strive to fulfill that dream.

The way things are today is the glory of little things, where no one will ever get out of that rut. The glory of playing rat basketball, or softball and for what, "a T-shirt?" Today everybody gets into the picture. Getting a T-shirt for entering a tournament. When all the applause quiets down everyone forgets of who you are. Yep! it's that way all across the country. People can only see the glory of the little things that don't count except for the few moments as the awards are being passed out. In the olden days the leagues used to run all season long and at the end of the season there was a tournament and the champion team would get the trophy and that was it. No second place no all stars and that really meant a lot to a team to win the trophy. Goes to show what glory means now days. Instead of setting a big goal or have a big dream, little material things

Take Ted Nuce, he set his goal and fulfilled his dream and that was to be the Worlds Champion Bullrider. He did that. And in Calgary, Canada just about a month ago he won the $50,000 bull riding championship. And Bullriding is a tough profession to be in. There are all sorts of sports events Indian kids can fit into and become world famous if they would set their goals and work hard to accomplish them.

Variety of sporting events to be held August 14-16

Strom envisions need for Indian athletics, and coordinates "Sports Festival"

Leon Strom of Wapato, Washington has been involved with athletics since as far as he or his opponents can remember.

His athletic resume includes playing baseball, football, basketball, fast pitch softball and slow pitch softball. Strom has also coached a number of men's and women's softball teams, and is presently the head coach of the Toppenish High School girl's softball

That may be clue enough as to why he conceived the idea of having Sports Festival" here on the Yakima Nation. The Festival itself is just what it implies," stated Strom, "a gathering of athletes participating and socializing on a competitive basis without being restricted to a point system for the nation the athlete represents."

Strom is not new to organizing sporting events. He has coordinated the National Indian Invitational men's and women's softball tournaments since the early 80's. The event has also included youth divisions for boys' baseball and girls' softball. And he feels it's a philosophy of bringing together athletes of all ages from across Indian Country and giving them the chance to shine is the driving force behind the Sports Fes-

'We all know the complexities of the Olympics, or in our case, the Indian Olympics, and the difficulty for all members to be tied to their tribe in an arena of competition." "The Festival will allow us to maintain competition, expand events, enjoy our Indian athletes in their quest for a spot in the sun."

He, and other members of a volunteer committee, are looking to have a boy's baseball tournament, women's softball, men's softball, volleyball tournaments, and a track and field meet for this year's event. The events are scheduled for August 14-16 in Wapato, Washington.

Committee members foresee future events could include junior and adult golf tournaments, tennis, a triathlon, swimming, and a rodeo. And it is for the future that Strom and others are now volunteering their time

"In undertaking this new direction for the 21st century, the committee's mission is to promote and maintain the identity of our various tribes in the U.S. and Canada through sporting events, participation, social awareness, and cultural sharing in an athletic atmosphere," Strom notes.

Doris Peters, of Granger, Washington, has stepped forward to coordinate the track and field meet, while Victor Gardee, of Toppenish, Washington, has volunteered to run the volleyball tournaments. Betty Hamilton and Angie Sampson, both of Wapato, will be directing the women's softball games, while Strom will focus on the men's tournament.

Strom said that there has been interest expressed in a boy's 12 years and under baseball tournament, but it will depend on finding people willing to volunteer their time running

"It takes untold hours of preparation by people who's overall focus is to have and event that highlights the Indian athlete, "Strom states, "We're always looking for more volunteers to help put such events together."

Strom summed up the Festival Committee's purpose as: "We foresee the reduction of tribal identity, cultural and involvement by Native Americans as we move toward a new future for our youth. To rectify such an adjustment, it is our hope that even though we might be engulfed in society, we still can maintain our identity as Indigenous, People.'

Following is an outline of what events are being held this year at the Yakima Nation Sports Festival, August 14-16, in Wapato, Washington. Any questions regarding information can be directed to Leon Strom at (509) 865-2939; or, Ronn Washines at (509) 865-5121.
