The sponsor of Senior Day lunches will need to be justified. Team songs, clothes, buttons, Kah-Nee-Ta pins were in demand, Halloween costumes, and anything from the reservation seemed to be unique for trading. And our sponsors of clothing won recognition from the convention participants. We were a great advertisement for central Oregon and the tribe. Let us proceed to 1992. A message to grandparents from the wellness group, "Convince your children that life is worth while."

was involved in a motor vehicle accident in Seattle, WA. We were very fortunate that she was wearing her seat belt and received no injuries.

However, she was scared and she did not know anyone in that area. She contacted my sister and her husband Foster. Foster contacted his cousin Larson and Pat Kalama, who went to Seattle and picked up my sister and took her into their home. My sister had never met Larson and Pat until they picked her up in Seattle. Not only did they give her a place to stay, they took her to sweat, helped her get the car towed and brought her all the way back to Bellingham.

Not often do you meet good people such as Larson and Pat Kalama. I thank God for bringing them to my sister. We will always remember you. And thank you Foster and J'Dean Kalama. You all set a good example for us to follow.

On Patrol

Alcohol and our young people:

In looking over the current year statistics on the alcohol related incidents involving our young community members, there have been 168 juveniles, those under the age of 18, arrested this year for being under the influence of alcohol with the average age being 15. Of these kids arrested, 44, or 26 percent, are noted to be repeat offenders. In particular, it is also noted that one juvenile has been arrested six times and another arrest nine times for being intoxicated.

There have been 191 people between the ages of 18 and 10 arrested and processed through the justice system for being under the influence of alcohol. The average age is 19, and 44, or 23 percent, are repeat offenders. With this, five minors were noted to have been arrested five or more times, with the maximum number of arrests at eight.

None-For-The-Road Committee:

The committee's most recent project is the exploration of a Victim's Impact Panel as an alternative to sentencing for DUI offenders.

With this, several members of the committee traveled to Clackamas County where they attended a Victim's Impact panel. Members were quite impressed with the panel and participants. Awareness was shared by the panel with various people found in violation of alcohol related offenses. Not only those individuals convicted of DUI attend the sessions; those who violate any alcohol-related offenses such as open container, MIP, etc., must attend as well. Drivers' education courses are also included.

Most recently, members of the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office and their DWI Task Force visited Warm Springs for a brief presentation on September 18 with hopes that the first Impact Panel will start up later this year.

Significant results have been shown through lower rate of repeat offenders with this awareness program and the committee looks to implement a similar program here.

From the Captain's Desk:

In a recent article published in the Bulletin, a report shows overall increases in violent juvenile crimes. After looking over our local statistics, Public Safety and parents of our community face even a greater challenge in leading our youth.

According to the report, over the last 10 years, juvenile violent crimes increased by 27.3 percent. Violent crimes include murder, rape and aggravated assault. In addition, a 62.6 percent increase has been noted in violation of weapons laws in connection with the crimes reported.

Locally, officers and investigators are dealing with more aggravated incidents involving our youth, whether it be the shootings within the last year, weapons being reported at the school, assault and battery reports, alcohol consumption on the buses, or wanna-be-gang members assaulting a 53-year-old man.

Show you care: Buckle up!

The Emergency Medical Technicians of Fire and Safety have become very concerned about the high number of children that have been injured this summer from car accidents. During September alone, four children fell out of a moving vehicle and two other children were injured when they were thrown around the inside of their car during a slow-speed car accident.

During one of the accidents, three children were ejected from the back of a moving truck at about 45 to 50 miles per hour. All three sustained major injuries to their knees, legs, chests and face. In a different accident, a young child, who was not in a seat belt, opened a car door and fell out while the car was going around a corner. The child received injuries to his head. In the last accident of this month, two children were slammed into the seats in front of them because they were sitting in the back seat of a car with no seatbelts on. When their car got hit, the children became projectiles.

In other accidents this summer, we have had two situations where children were left in the car with the engine running. The children were not belted in. They were able to slip the transmission into drive and caused an accident. In these two accidents,

The police department is asking for your help in assisting with trying to put a stop to some of these senseless acts of violence.

If you are a teenage and want or need help, contact a members of the local Boys and Girls Club, Rick Souers, the juvenile coordinator's office or myself at the police department.

three children and both adult drivers were injured by the moving car.

Early this summer, a car drove by the firehouse and the child who was leaning against the tailgate fell to the ground when the tailgate dropped. Also this summer, a child was in the back of a Blazer-type vehicle playing, when he fell out of the back through the open window.

Many parents do not understand the high amount of energy that takes place on the body of a child during an accident of these types. The following example should help to point this out.

If you took a five-pound sledge hammer and held it above your head, you would expect to hurt a lot if you dropped it on your foot. The amount of energy you would have forced on your body at the time of the impact would be 1,200 units. Now, a 100 pound child that falls out of a moving car at 50 miles per hour will have 125,000 units of energy forced on his body. That is why injuries are so bad when children are not belted into the inside of a car. Children who are not belted into a car and are ejected during an accident are six times more likely to die than children who are not ejected.

Please remember that, as adults, we have the choice to wear or not to wear a seatbelt. We also have the choice to decide if we should ride in the back of a pick-up. Our children do not have that choice and we owe it to them to see that they are safe. Please see to it that your children:

1. Do not ride in the back of pick-ups
2. That babies are in car seats and that the car seats are attached by seatbelts.
3. That children are wearing their seatbelts.
4. That children are not held in the arms of adults.

Children are our future. Please don't cut that future short by giving a child a life with major injuries or having a child lose their life. Love your child! Seatbelt them inside your car!

Sherri Smith, Amelia Spino for donating the venison.

The runners also want to acknowledge Leo Hellon for meeting and running with them into the reservation.

T-shirts, swim passes, gloves, socks, sweat shirts were given by, Kah-Nee-Ta, Intertribal Sports, Apparel Industries, KWSO, Runners Club, special thanks to the Early Childhood for honoring them at their powwow.

Thank you Police Department, Fire & Safety for the escort as well as Raneva for allowing the use of her department for contact calls and for allowing Starla to run around in preparation for the runners. Thanks to "Wiggy" and "8 Ball, Jr." for making and keeping the sweathouse going for the runners. Also for the drummers that came to my house to hold Washat services and the people that brought food.

Of all the places that they had traveled through, Warm Springs really made their journey extra special. They felt the love and kindness and prayers of the people here. They were "pumped up," as they put it, when they left here, for they were feeling weary and tired coming out of Portland. Now they all felt that they were able to continue the journey.

Once more I would like to thank everybody for the support and kindness that you showed these wonderful athletes.
