

Forest Grove School included vocational training

Forest Grove boarding school preceded Chemawa boarding school which opened in 1880. Warm Springs had some students attending the training school. Students spent half of each school day in classes and half in vocational training.

Photos courtesy of the Mid-Oregon Indian Historical Society

Young Indian students attended school and learned vocational skills at the Forest Grove training school which operated in the late 1800's.

Young men became practiced in carpentry skills.

Laundering clothes was one of the duties for girls.

Young women learn pressing technique.

Cooking and kitchen activities were important skills to learn.