Week of the Young Child focuses on abuse prevention

The Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs Children's Protective Services Department is recognizing Child Abuse Prevention Month by sponsoring community activities to heighten the awareness for prevention of child abuse and neglect. April was declared child abuse prevention month 1983.

The Week of the Young Child will be celebrated during the second week of April with a parade spon-sored by the Early Childhood Center. CPS is participating in the parade. CPS will operate two booths at the ECE Week of the Child carnival.

During the third week of April the Children's Protective Services Department will have an open house of the CPS office, CPS Center and the Family Preservation offices.

Videos will be demonstrated during the noon hour of the last week of April in the CPS conference room. Following are some facts relating to child abuse and neglect. Child abuse was formally recognized by the medical profession in 1961 as the "battered child syn-

. In 1990, State child protective service agencies received and referred for investigation an estimated 1.7 million reports of alleged child abuse and neglect, involving approximately 2.7 million children. Since 1980, reports of child abuse and neglect have more than doubled.

 Approximately 833,000 children were found to be substantiated or indicated victims of child abuse and neglect in 1990. More than three children die each day in the United States as a result of abuse or neglect.

· Among substantiated cases of child maltreatment in 1990, approximately 45 percent were for neglect, 25 percent for physical abuse, 16 percent for sexual abuse, and 14 percent for other forms of maltreat-

· The link between substance abuse and child abuse has strengthened over the past years. Parental abuse of alcohol and use of other drugs has been identified as a major factor contributing to child maltreatment and death. It is estimated that nearly 10 million children under age 18 are affected in some way by the substance abuse of their parents.

Child maltreatment often has negative short and long term affects on children's mental health and development. For example, abused and neglected children frequently suffer drops in IQ and an increase in learning disabilities, depression and drug use.

· The effects of child abuse are sometimes obvious even decades later. The effects are often pervasive: mental, physical and social in nature. Suicide, violence, delinquency, drug and alcohol abuse and other forms of criminality are frequently child abuse

. Studies of adults show that 15 percent to 38 percent of women report experiences of various types of sexual victimization during childhood and adolescence, and about 10 percent of men report sexual abuse during childhood and adolescence. · Although child abuse occurs in all racial, ethnic, cultural and socioeconomic groups, physical abuse and neglectare more likely among people in poverty. Reflecting the high rates of poverty among ethnic minorities, minority children enter the child protection system in disproportionately large numbers.

Northwest Tribal leaders part of Forest Summit

In the Columbia Basin forests of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, roads are being built and trees cut without real regard for the rivers and streams that support fish life. Now in the upper Columbia Basin, Snake River sockeye and chinook stocks have received federal designation as either threatened or endangered species. Yet the basin's fish habitat continues to be damaged by erosion, sedimentation of streams and denuded riverbanks.

President Clinton's Forest Summit provides a unique opportunity to highlight these problems. So you may learn about tribal perspectives on these matters, the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission (CRITFC) plans to have representa-tives—both cultural leaders and elected tribal officials-from the Warm Springs, Yakima, Umatilla, and Nez Perce tribes available to speak to members of the media. In addition, tribal leaders from coastal Washington and Puget Sound may also be reached through our offices. We anticipate tribal leader availability on March 31 and April 1 and 2. The four Columbia River treaty tribes not only have reserved fishing rights to all their "usual and accustomed" fishing places throughout the Columbia Basin, the tribes are also actively involved in managing and trying to rebuild the salmon resource.

CRITFC will host a luncheon on April 2 for their tribal leaders and for any summit participants and members of the media who can break away for a nourishing meal of traditional Columbia River Indian foods. From 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., salmon and other traditional foods will be served. Join CRITFC for some quiet Indian hospitality. (Forest conference proceedings will be simulcast throughout the lunch hours.)

To reach a tribal spokesperson or for more information, contact Carol Craig (direct line: 731-1285 or 238-0667) or Laura Berg (direct line: 731-1283 or 238-0667). CRITFC is located two blocks east of the convention center on 729 NE Oregon. The April 2 luncheon will take place in the basement conference room.
