Circus due to roll into town June 3

The Madras Saddle Club is bringing the Culpepper & Merriweather Circus to Madras on Thursday, June 3, 1993, for shows at 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Known throughout the industry as "America's most highly acclaimed," the Culpepper & Merriweather Circus came by that title after being featured on television in a documentary produced by the National Geographic Explorer series. The Circus featured in print by the Chicago Tribune, Los Angeles Times, three of the ten top daily newspapers, and numerous newspapers throughout the Southwest and Midwest.

A totally traditional circus, the Big Top will set up at the Jefferson County Fairgrounds. Featured will be aerial artists, clowns, liberty ponies, performing dogs, jugglers, and more. The super star is nine-year old Barbara, an African elephant, whose mother was killed by poachers for her tusks.

Anderson receives instructor award from COCC

John Anderson was selected by Central Oregon Community College Community Education as Instructor of the Year for 1993.

Anderson has taught various computer classes at the Warm Springs Center for about four years. Students regard him as resourceful, friendly and courteous.

Anderson was honored at a banquet at COCC May 21 along with other selected instructors from throughout Central Oregon.

COCC began honoring community education instructors during the 1986-1987 school years as a way to thank and appreciate the instructors for sharing their talents and expertise.

Warm Springs Elementary School news

Thank you JOM Committee

We would like to give a big Thank You to the JOM Committee for funding the summer library at Warm Springs Elementary School again this year. They have made it possible to add a computer lab to the program, and we know this will provide even more learning opportunities for our students.

Common bonds join trio of tribal lawyers

submitted by Education Services Programs Director

In May 1988, Celeste Whitewolf, Tribal member of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, graduated from Lewis and Clark Law School. She was the first female tribal member to accomplish this goal. Whitewolf is the daughter of Jeanne Danzuka and the late Buddy Kalama.

Since passing the Oregon Bar, Whitewolf has opened up her own law office in Warm Springs and in Portland. In 1992, she moved her Warm Springs office to Portland where her work is now housed under one roof. She is a successful business woman, has traveled to various seminars and has been a keynote speaker at different functions, including the second annual Women's Conference held in Warm Springs last year.

Dr. Janice White Clemmer received her Juris Doctorate degree April 23, 1993 from the J. Reuben Clark Law School at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. She is the daughter of Cecil and Aradonna Seyler and the late Walter White.

Clemmer is the second tribal member of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs to receive the Juris Doctorate. This is her third doctorate. Clemmer is preparing for her Utah bar exams and is a tenured professor at Brigham Young University, working in the College of Education and Department of History.

Anita Louise Jackson is the third female tribal member of the Confed-

Tribes express concerns regarding DOE

Representatives of nine tribal governments and officials of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) met with Secretary Hazel O'Leary of the US Department of Energy (DOE) on May 13 to discuss a list of concerns regarding DOE policy and programs. Secretary O'Leary stated that she will respond quickly to the issues presented.

"When Secretary O'Leary became aware of our request for a meeting with tribal leaders and the NCAI, she called to set up this historic meeting," said Michael Anderson, NCAI Executive Director. "To my knowledge, it is the first meeting between a DOE Secretary and the NCAI. We feel confident Secretary O'Leary will work with tribal governments in a positive way on energy-related issues and will strive to fulfill the Department's trust responsibility to Indian tribes on cultural resource protection and environmental quality preservation and restoration," he said.

The NCAI, established in 1944, is the oldest national tribal advocacy organization in the country.

The major point of discussion was the DOE Indian Policy issued in December 1991 and its implementation. Some tribal leaders believe the Policy needs fine tuning and would also like to see Native Americans at senior and programmatic levels to carry out the implementation.

In response, Secretary O'Leary stated that it was not her style to do an across the board implementation without first seeing what will work.

"We need to focus and develop a model, rather than to deploy (our efforts) across the Department," she said.

Anderson noted, "The Secretary views DOE Indian policy implementation as a long process and has committed to meet periodically on its progress. We feel comfortable with this approach."

The group also asked for DOE support for amendments to the American Indian Religious Freedom Act (AIRFA) specifically to protect Native American sacred sites that may be jeopardized by DOE project activities.

Other issues discussed included early consultation with tribal leaders on DOE budget formulations; augmenting the budget and staff of the Federal Preservation Office to enable that program to expand its efforts to work directly with tribal officials on cultural resource management issues; increased outreach to tribal governments for alternative energy resource development under Title XXIX of Energy Policy Act of 1992; and adequate tribal funding to tribes participating in the DOE Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Program.

The issue of "affected status" of tribes whose lands and resources are impacted or potentially impacted by the Yucca Mountain high level waste repository project in Nevada was also discussed. Under the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, standards for a tribe to have an "affected status" are more stringent than those for states and counties, even though Yucca Mountain area tribes have closer cultural and historical ties to the area being characterized.

Representatives of tribes participating in the meeting with Secretary O'Leary included: Calvin Myers, Vice Chairman of the Moapa Band of Paiute Indians; Donna Powauke, Director of the Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Program for the Nez Perce Tribe; Edith Pacini, Member of the Prairie Island Band of Mowekanton Sioux Tribal Council; J. Gilbert Sanchez, First Lieutenant Governor of San Ildefonso Pueblo; Brett J. Hayball, Council member of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes of the Fort Hall Indian Reservation; Richard Bear, Vice-Chairman, and Leon Bear, Secretary-Treasurer, Skull Valley Goshute Tribe; Dan Hester, tribal attorney for the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation, and Russell Jim, Project Manager of the Environmental Restoration Program for the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakima Indian Nation. Jim is Chairman of the NINWPC.

In addition to Anderson, NCAI officials attending were: Ron Allen, NCAI Treasurer, and Chairman of the Jamestown S'Klallam Tribe and Robert Holden, Director of the NCAI Nuclear Waste Policy project.
