Race shows stamina, determination and desire by all

Robin Gunshows made a haul by taking first place in the Senior Division, with a record breaking time of 47.51.

The Pi-Ume-Sha Days Endurance Race is an event which takes stamina, determination and desire. This year these elements were demonstrated by all who entered. However, only three people from each division were deemed the victors.

In the senior division, including ages 14 and older, Robin Gunshows took first place after 14 miles of competition at a time of 47.51. He won a first place beaded trophy belt buckle, a saddle blanket, beaded cap, beaded head stall and rein, rope, first place jacket, saddle bag and a money prize of $250. Coming in behind Junior racers cross the finish line in the mini version of the endurance race. Joe Scott, Jr. was the Junior champion.

Gunshows was Norm Thomas with a time of 48.23. Thomas received a second place jacket, beaded cap, bridle, rein, rope, horn bag, second place beaded trophy belt buckle and $150. Coming up in third place was Charles Dick with a time of 49.55 who won a bridle, rein, rope and $100.

The junior division was just as competitive as the senior division. 14 people entered to win this 7 mile endurance race that began at approximately 8:20 am, ten minutes after the senior division began.

The first junior division competitor to arrive at the finish was Joe Scott Jr. with a time of 8.41. His task was rewarded with a beaded trophy belt buckle, a saddle blanket, horn bat, rope, beaded cap and $50. Coming in second place with a time of 9.32 was Trevor Hurtado. For his efforts he received a saddle blanket, beaded cap, rope and $30. Eugene Wewa came in third place with a time of 9.33. He won a saddle blanket, rope and a cash prize of $20.

Annual Treaty Days All-Indian rodeo offers thrills, spills—again

Treaty Days Rodeo draws a good number of contestants as they traveled from far and near to participate in the Western States Indian Rodeo Association, sanctioned rodeo held here June 25-26, 1994. A very important rodeo for the WSIRA members as all the points won here go toward the trip to the Indian National Finals rodeo held in November each year. For many years the finals have been held in Albuquerque, NM. This year they will be held in Rapid City, South Dakota. A new surroundings for the cowboys this year.]

Speaking of new surroundings, here in Warm Springs the rodeo committee decided to do a face lift and changed the entire rodeo arena around. Where the bleachers for the spectators used to be on the east side, today they are on the west side and the bucking chuts are on the east side. This makes it more pleasant for the spectators as the sun is not in their eyes and when there is a little breeze the dust don't blow into the spectators. Eventually a race track may be added to the rodeo arena, also in the plans are a covered grandstand and many more surprises in the future.

P-9 Rodeo stock provided plenty of action alone with Grossmiller behind the mike kept the show in a steady pace all afternoon. There were some added attractions to keep the show exciting during the slack periods.

Scott Rogers of Shurz, Nevada, was named the All-Around champion for this years rodeo and took home a beautiful saddle, sponsored by JR Logging Co. Results of the events are as follows.

Added attractions at Treaty days todeo

Added attraction provides plenty of action at the annual Treaty day's rodeo. One of the added attractions was the Wildhorse race where the stock was as rank as they come in any arena across the nation, cowboys trying their best to handle their stock. Teams going every direction with guys hanging on the rope being drug all over the place.

During the two day show the wild horse race championship went to the team of Tracy Graybael which included Louis (Blockhead) Spino, and Terry Squiemphen. They were able to get two horses saddled during the show and go across the finish line. The Wildhorse race is very popular in many rodeos as an added attraction to thrill the fans as it is as wild as it sounds.

Another added event was a Wild Colt race for kids 14 years old and younger. The Colts were well matured and well over a year old to give the kids all they could handle. There were only two teams entered in the final day as a special event during the intermission period. The winners were Joe Scott Jr. (Juice), Isreal Scott and Clifford Pampierin. The other team consisted of Jered Moses, Phillip Squiemphen and Sidney Minnick.

The object was to ride the colt through the finish line in front of the stands. It took quite a bit of wrangling but Joe Scott Jr. finally made it through.
