Hatchery firefighters receive awards for efforts during LeClaire blaze

Eight individuals were honored at an awards luncheon last week for their help in preventing the LeClaire Fire from damaging the Warm Springs National Fish Hatchery. Mavis Shaw, Nat Shaw, Bodie Shaw, Robert Smith, Oswald Tias, Dave Simmons, Troy Kaska and Steven Joe were granted the Exemplary Act Award of the Department of the Interior for their "prompt and courageous actions during the fire."

The 33,000-acre LeClaire fire threatened the fish hatchery at the fire's onset July 25, 1994. A single hatchery employee, Mavis Shaw, her husband and son, three professional firefighters, a fish and game officer and another volunteer worked together to prevent the fire from damaging the facility.

The fire began mid-afternoon on July 25 on the flat above the hatchery and raced down the hill and burned from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. the following morning. The fire blazed inside the perimeter fence and up to within a few feet of the residences and other structures in several places. At one point, an attempt was made to evacuate the area, but the team was trapped. Another hatchery employee was able to reach the facility Tuesday morning but other employees were denied access until Wednesday morning due to fire and excessive smoke. The fire was not contained until Thursday, Honored by the Department of the Interior at a recent luncheon were (left to right) Bob Smith, Michael Palya, Mavis Shaw, Troy Kaska, Dave Simmons and Nat Shaw. Also honored but Not available for photograph were Bodie Shaw, Oswald Tias and Steven Joe.

July 28. The hatchery sustained no damage.

Warm Springs National Fish Hatchery is an integral part of the Deschutes River Management System. The hatchery produces spring chinook salmon to augment harvest in the Pacific Ocean, Columbia River and in particular, the Deschutes. The facility is unique in that the production program is operated in conjunction with one of a handful of naturally sustained spring chinook salmon populations in the Northwest. Loss of the facility and production from the facility would have affected the Columbia River ecosystem, the State of Oregon, the Confederated Tribes, several service offices and a national Biological Survey hatchery supplementation project that has basin-wide application.

An Elder's Lament

She laughed and she giggled on Grandfather's knee;
That the old Chief loved her was easy to see.
She raced on his horses and tried to win.
The greatest gift was the old Chief's grin.
To her mother and father she could do no wrong.
As she danced in the Washut and
sang every song.
When the old ones died, they gave
her lands.
Then hard times came and she worked with her hands.

She fell in love and soon was wed.
Then came one, then five, then
eight she fed.
In those days there was no G.A.
She scraped hides, sewing buck-
skins as her pay.
She made lots of gloves and by
lantern did bead,
Sending kids to school and buying
some feed.
She once brought the mail to the North End,
With four chained tires through thick or thin.

Now she is old; her hair is gray.
It's hard to remember the things of today.
Her hands are gnarled; her moccasins worn.
She thinks of her kids when they were born.
Do they think of her? It's hard to say....
They rarely see her from day to day.

Before the day comes our elders to mourn,
Let's give them our time, for they helped us be born.

plaintiff fails to appear at the hearing, the court may dismiss the case for lack of prosecution, allow the defendant to offer proof, or continue the case

man form must be submitted for approval at least
