Draft Deschutes management plan to be presented

The Deschutes River is one of Oregon's most visited and appreciated rivers. Several agencies have cooperatively prepared a new management plan for the 21st century. The plan is described in a Draft Environmental Impact Statement released by 15 agencies, including the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, and organizations who have worked on the effort for the past two and one-half years. The collaborative effort involved many other Central Oregon agencies, individuals and organizations.

The planning enters another phase now with the 90-day public comment period that closes on January 27, 1996. During this period the cooperators have scheduled three public workshops:

Madras—(Jefferson County Fairgrounds, 4-H Building) November 14

Bend—(New National Guard Armory, 875 NW Simpson) November 15

LaPine—(High School Library) November 16.

The workshops will begin at 6:30 p.m. and end at 8:30 p.m. They will consist of two parts, an informal information exchange and a public comment period, both oral and written. After the comment period closes the cooperators will review the comments and consider what adjustments to the alternatives should be made. The cooperators will then craft a final plan.

The Management Plan focuses on numerous issues raised by citizens and groups during the planning. The collaborative approach to issue identification and resolution has been central to creating alternative management scenarios for the River. The cooperators wanted a sustainable river system that is healthy, beneficial and properly managed.

The Upper Deschutes River was designated a part of the National Wild and Scenic River System in 1988 by the US Congress. At the same time, citizens of Oregon recognized the special nature of the river by designating it a State Scenic Waterway through the initiative process in 1988. The Plan is the follow-up to the citizen initiative success and the Congress' action to protect and enhance the river. The 55-mile section extends from Wickiup Reservoir downstream to the Central Oregon Irrigation District diversion, two miles up-stream from downtown Bend. The coordinating group consisting of 15 agencies was formed in 1993 to cooperatively and collaboratively develop one management plan for the Deschutes River, one of Oregon's premier waterways.

Halloween tips offered

Children should select brightly colored costumes with reflective materials reminds Mountain View Hospital District. Flame retardant costumes are safest. Parents should accompany young children while making the rounds and goblins should also carry a flashlight.

Halloween treats with broken wrappers or seals should be discarded while fruit and homemade goodies can be cut into several sections to check for tampering.

Free X-rays of treats will be offered by Mountain View Hospital District on Tuesday, October 31, between 7 and 9 p.m. Parents wishing to have their children's loot examined are asked to bring the treats to the admitting/emergency entrance located off of "A" street.

Avoid the flu; get a shot and stay healthy

The flu season is fast approaching. Influenza (flu) is an acute viral illness with symptoms of fever, headache, cough and sore, achy muscles. It can last form two to seven days. Flu is spread through the air and also by direct contact through droplet spread.

Area residents and employees are warned not to be caught off guard. A flu shot is needed every year because the strains of influenza change years. The vaccine this year includes B/Texas, B/Beijing, and A/Johannesburg antigens. The vaccine is especially recommended for adults and children with chronic health conditions and their household contacts, and persons over age 65.

This year, the Clinic Public Health Nursing Department is offering flu shots at various locations on the reservation. There is no charge and appointments are not necessary. Any person, tribal member or non-tribal member, living or working on the reservation is welcome to receive a vaccination.

For further information, call the Public Health Nursing Department at 553-1196.
